MOSCOW'S TOP 10

Top 10 Moscow's Highlights

Despite Stalin's destruction of much of Moscow's architectural heritage, what remains is enough to convey the impression of a medieval capital that collided with a Soviet juggernaut. It is a city where petite onion-domed churches and 19th-century mansions compete with epic neo-Gothic skyscrapers and ten-lane ring roads. Ironically, Communism's greatest contribution to the city – the magnificent metro system – lies deep underground. In recent years bold modern structures have been added to Moscow's progressive skyline and Muscovites have begun to recover pride in their city by funding the restoration of lost landmarks such as the Cathedral of Christ the Saviour (see p74).

St Basil's Cathedral 1

Built in the 16th century, during the uncertain times of Ivan the Terrible, Moscow's magnificent centrepiece continues to be as enthralling as ever (see pp8–9).

Tverskaya

2 Red Square

The historic square, also called Krasnaya Ploshchad, is home to two of Moscow's most famous sights – St Basil's Cathedral and the Lenin Mausoleum (see pp10–11).

Arbatskaya

Cathedral of the Assumption 3

The cathedral's stunning gilt frescoed interior has hosted coronation ceremonies since the 16th century (see pp12–13).

4 State Armoury

With its array of gleaming weaponry and priceless treasures, including exquisite diamonds and Fabergé eggs, the Armoury offers a fascinating insight into the life of Russia's nobility (see pp14–15).

Pushkin Museum of Fine Arts 5

This superb collection takes in some 500,000 masterly artworks from across the globe, including ancient artifacts, sculptures and paintings (see pp16–17).

6 Bolshoy Theatre

Home to one of the oldest ballet companies in the world, the Bolshoy is Europe's second-largest opera house, after Milan's La Scala. Performances are currently being staged at an alternative venue while the grand auditorium undergoes renovations (see pp18–19).

7 Tretyakov Gallery

From its humble beginnings in the family home of the art enthusiast Pavel Tretyakov, this gallery has evolved into one of the world's greatest collections of Russian art (see pp20–23).

8 Metro Stations

Moscow's palatial metro stations are artistic monuments in their own right. Each station offers a different depiction of the Soviet ideal; some are filled with striking sculptures, while others feature mosaics or stained-glass panels (see pp24–5).

9 Novodevichiy Convent

This UNESCO-listed convent is a wonderfully preserved example of 17th-century Moscow Baroque architecture; it also boasts the city's most famous graveyard (see pp26–7).

10 Kolomenskoe Estate

A favourite summer home of the tsars, Kolomenskoe enjoys an idyllic location beside the Moskva river and makes for a lovely day out (see pp28–9).

Top 10 St Basil's Cathedral

With red-brick towers and swirling onion domes, this gloriously colourful cathedral is perhaps Russia's most emblematic building. Ivan the Terrible ordered its construction to celebrate capturing the Tatar stronghold of Kazan, 800 km (500 miles) east of Moscow, in 1552. The cathedral was designed with eight chapels, each representing a successful assault made on Kazan. A ninth chapel was added later to cover the grave of Basil the Blessed, the pious ascetic to whom the cathedral owes its popular name.

Visitors inside St Basil's Cathedral

🕒 Linger in the Central Chapel where you might hear the cathedral's male choir sing promotional excerpts from their CD of Orthodox chants.

🛍️ The nearby GUM shopping mall (see p64) has plenty of cafés and ice-cream parlours.

- 4 Internal Wooden Staircase
- 5 Onion Domes
- 6 St Basil's Chapel
- 7 Chapel of St Cyprian
- 8 Interior Frescoes

- 10 History Exhibition

1 Tiled Gallery

The warren of narrow galleries (above) and stairways connecting St Basil's chapels over different levels was covered over in the 17th century and subsequently decorated with elaborate tiles featuring floral and geometric designs.

Iconostases

The cathedral's nine iconostases (right), symbolizing the separation between the divine and the earthly world, comprise over 400 icons from the Moscow and Novgorod schools of icon painting.

3 Tent-Roofed Bell Tower
Added to St Basil's Cathedral during the late 17th century, the bell tower (left) is located at the south-east corner. It rang until 1918, when the Communist authorities closed the cathedral and melted down its bells. It was not until 1997 that new bells were cast and once again rang out over Moscow.

4 Internal Wooden Staircase

Leading up to the Chapel of the Intercession, this spiral wooden staircase (below) remained hidden for hundreds of years until its accidental discovery in the 1970s during renovation work. It is now open to the public.

5 Onion Domes
The cathedral's central tower is surrounded by onion domes: four large and four small (centre). Originally gilded, they received their first full-colour treatment in 1670.

6 St Basil's Chapel
In 1588, Tsar Fyodor commissioned a ninth chapel, with a small dome, to contain the relics of Basil the Blessed (1468–1552).

7 Chapel of St Cyprian

Each of the original eight chapels honours the saint upon whose feast day an assault on Kazan occurred. St Cyprian's Day was that of the penultimate attack on the stronghold. With a striped blue-and-white dome, this chapel is one of the cathedral's largest.

8 Interior Frescoes
The interior of each chapel is illuminated by 19th-century oil paintings and the bright colours of freshly restored frescoes (above) dating back to the 16th century.

Lucky Escapes

St Basil's Cathedral has twice escaped destruction. During his conquest of Moscow in 1812 Napoleon ordered its demolition, but the task was abandoned when rain dampened the gunpowder. Stalin contemplated knocking it down to facilitate the exit of troops parading across Red Square, but was stopped by the architect Baranovsky, who threatened to cut his own throat. The gesture earned Baranovsky five years of hard labour.

9 St Basil's Name
The cathedral only adopted its popular moniker after St Basil was interred here. It was originally named the Cathedral of the Intercession of the Virgin on the Moat.

10 History Exhibition
A small exhibition inside the main entrance chronicles St Basil's history and includes a display of 16th-century weaponry used during Ivan the Terrible's campaign against Kazan.

Top 10 Red Square

Red Square (Krasnaya Ploshchad) has been at the heart of Moscow for over 500 turbulent years, and its grand buildings recall the city's eventful history. Here, Ivan the Terrible mutilated prisoners before repenting of his sins at Lobnoe Mesto; it was he who funded the construction of St Basil's Cathedral. In 1812 a victorious Napoleon addressed his troops on the square, while stabling their horses in the cathedral. Lenin Mausoleum was added by the Communists, who later demolished both the Resurrection Gate and Kazan Cathedral to make way for enormous military parades. The square has been restored to its pre-Soviet appearance.

Kilometre Zero, near Resurrection Gate

1 Before queuing for the Lenin Mausoleum, leave large bags and any photographic equipment at the Historical Museum's cloakroom to avoid being refused entry.

2 Facing Red Square, the Bosco Café (see p67) in the GUM shopping mall has a great range of ice creams and desserts.

1 Statue of Marshal Zhukov

Astride a stallion, Marshal Zhukov (below) raises his palm in symbolic defence of the Kremlin. In 1944 he successfully lifted the siege of Leningrad, before pushing back the Germans and capturing Berlin in 1945.

2 St Basil's Cathedral

Moscow's enduring highlight, with its eclectic mix of colourful domes (above) and lovely chapel interiors, has stood here since 1561 (see pp8–9).

3 Lobnoe Mesto

Despite its ominous name, meaning "execution place", this has only ever been used as a speaker's platform; leaders have made proclamations from here since the 16th century.

4 Statue of Minin and Pozharskiy

This dramatic statue depicts the two legendary Russian heroes who drove Polish troops out of the Kremlin in 1612.

5 GUM

Occupying the eastern side of the square, this glitzy 19th-century shopping mall (below) was once the largest of its kind in Europe. Three gleaming arcades are connected by elegant walkways (see p64).

6 Kilometre Zero

The brass plaque in the ground here marks the point from which all distances from Moscow are measured. The spot is scattered with coins for luck.

7 Resurrection Gate

Built in 1995, this is a copy of the original 17th-century gate demolished by Stalin to allow parading troops easier access to the square.

8 Lenin Mausoleum

Designed by Aleksey Shchusev, the mausoleum features a rooftop terrace from which leaders might view military parades (see p63).

Kremlin Wall Graves

These graves (see p63) have been used to inter the ashes of Soviet heroes since 1917, when 200 revolutionaries were buried here. Soviet leaders were buried in individual tombs. Stalin's body was embalmed and laid beside that of Lenin, where it remained until 1961, when it was removed and buried following Khrushchev's de-Stalinization programme.

9 Historical Museum

This imposing red-brick building (centre) houses a fascinating array of over 20,000 exhibits, including Palaeolithic mammoth remains (see p63).

Kazan Cathedral 10

Rebuilt in 1993 in the style of the 17th-century original, this exquisite cathedral (right) houses a replica of the miracle-working Icon of the Kazan Virgin (see p37).

Between the arches of the Resurrection Gate lies the tiny Iverskaya Chapel, where tsars would pray before entering the Kremlin.

Top 10 Cathedral of the Assumption

Originally founded in 1326, the cathedral was redesigned in 1470 by Italian architect Aristotle Fioravanti in Renaissance spirit. For centuries it hosted Russia's most important ceremonies, including the coronation of Ivan the Terrible in 1547 and the inaugurations and burials of the patriarchs and metropolitans of the Orthodox Church. The cathedral retained its importance even after the capital was moved to St Petersburg in 1713, but was closed by the Communists in 1918; religious services resumed in 1990.

- 5 St George Icon
- 6 Miraculous Virgin of Vladimir Icon
- 7 Monomakh Throne
- 8 Tomb of Metropolitan St Peter
- 9 Tomb of Metropolitan St Iona
- 10 Harvest Chandelier

1 Patriarch's Seat

This white-stone prayer seat was used by metropolitans and patriarchs from the 16th century. It was from this chair that Metropolitan St Philip II (1507–69) refused to bless Ivan the Terrible in 1568.

Iconostasis 2

The gleaming iconostasis (right), which dominates the cathedral, was built in 1813. The original iconostasis, dating from 1652, was destroyed by Napoleonic troops the previous year. It comprises a remarkable series of gilt-framed icons rising five levels to a grand 14th-century portrait of Christ.

3 Tabernacle

Cast in 1624, the latticed bronze tabernacle served as a repository for Russia's collection of holy relics, including one of the four nails used to crucify Christ. Today it contains the remains of Patriarch Germogen (1530–1612).

The patriarch heads the Russian Orthodox Church, while metropolitans (archbishops) are responsible for regions or cities.

Frescoes 4

The frescoes adorning the interior were painted in 1511 and a gilt layer was added 150 years later. The four huge central pillars (right) depict portraits of 140 martyrs.

5 St George Icon

Encased by glass, this 12th-century icon depicting a youthful St George was discovered under a layer of paint on the reverse of another icon in 1930.

6 Miraculous Virgin of Vladimir Icon

The revered 16th-century copy of the Virgin of Vladimir icon (below) is kept in a small gilt tabernacle beside the iconostasis.

7 Monomakh Throne

Installed as Ivan the Terrible's prayer seat in 1551, this elaborately carved throne owes its name to scenes on its rear panel depicting the life of Prince Vladimir Monomakh (1053–1155).

Unusual History

During Napoleon's occupation in 1812 the cathedral was one of many churches used to stable horses. To combat the cold, French troops cut up its 15th-century iconostasis to use as firewood. Stalin, who had a Christian upbringing, allegedly ordered a secret service to be held here in 1941 when the German army was approaching Moscow.

8 Tomb of Metropolitan St Peter

St Peter founded the cathedral in 1326 and his tomb is contained within a shrine with silver pillars and a canopy topped with a gilt dome.

Harvest Chandelier 10

This chandelier (right) was made from gold that Napoleon's soldiers looted during their occupation of Moscow in 1812, and later abandoned.

9 Tomb of Metropolitan St Iona

St Iona became Moscow's metropolitan in 1448. His gold and silver canopied shrine is one of the most sumptuous tombs in the cathedral.

A vivid fresco portraying the Day of Judgement takes up much of the cathedral's western wall.

Top 10 State Armoury

The Kremlin's fabulous collection of weaponry and treasure offers a fascinating insight into the immense wealth and power enjoyed by the Russian aristocracy throughout the centuries. Moscow's Grand Princes began storing their valuables in the Kremlin's cellars as early as the 14th century, but when space ran short a stone treasury was built between the fortress's cathedrals. The collection was first put on public display in 1806 and the current State Armoury was purpose-built as a museum on the orders of Tsar Nicholas I. Designed by Konstantin Ton in 1844, the building was completed in 1851. Here you will find remarkable ceremonial carriages, priceless churchware, glittering thrones and some of the world's largest jewels, including the famous Orlov Diamond.

Elegant interior of the State Armoury

 Tickets should be purchased in advance from the kiosk at Kutafya Tower.

Tickets for the Diamond Fund can only be purchased inside the Armoury.

Large bags must be deposited in the cloakroom beneath Kutafya Tower.

1 Diamond Throne
This gem-encrusted sandalwood throne (below) was gifted to Tsar Alexius in the 17th century by Armenians hopeful of securing Russian trade rights.

3 Russian Weaponry
The Round Hall has a fine array of 12th-century Russian weaponry. Ceremonial sabres and scabbards sit alongside 17th-century flintlock pistols and iron chainmail armour.

2 Catherine the Great's Wedding Dress
Among the royal outfits on display is Catherine the Great's finely embroidered silver wedding dress. Her loveless marriage at 16 to Peter III led to his abdication and her assumption of power.

4 Ceremonial Saddlery and Carriages

The saddlery on display includes Ivan the Terrible's velvet-covered saddle and a harness given to Catherine the Great by Turkish Sultan Abdul Hamid. The oldest carriage here (left) was a gift to Boris I from King James I in 1604.

5 Miniature Carriages

Among the collection of royal carriages is a delightful pair of miniature carriages that were produced in the 17th century for Peter the Great's children.

6 Crown of Monomakh

Edged with sable fur and topped with jewels and a gold cross, this ancient crown was first used at Ivan the Terrible's coronation in 1547.

7 The Diamond Fund

Among the Fund's sparkling highlights are the Large Emperor's Crown (above), with 5,000 diamonds, and the Shah Diamond, presented to Tsar Nicholas I by Fath Ali Shah as compensation for the murder of Russia's ambassador in Persia.

8 The Orlov Diamond

The world's fourth-largest diamond adorns the Imperial Sceptre. Taken from an Indian temple, it was one of the many presents given to Catherine the Great by her lover, Count Grigoriy Orlov.

Fabergé Fascination

The wealthy art collector Malcolm Forbes (1919–90) is credited with reviving the world's interest in Fabergé eggs. Between 1960 and 1990 he tracked down nine of the Russian royal family's eggs and paid large sums for them. His collection was put up for auction after his death in 1990 and was purchased by Russian oligarch Viktor Vekselberg.

9 Ambassadorial Gifts

Lavish gifts received from diplomats and merchants include English Tudor silverware, a 140-piece Sèvres porcelain dessert service gifted to Emperor Alexander I by Napoleon in 1807, and a wonderful silver decanter given to Tsar Alexis in 1665.

10 Fabergé Eggs

The Armoury owns one of the world's largest collections of Fabergé eggs (left), produced as Easter gifts for Tsar Nicholas II and his family between 1885 and 1917. Among them is an exquisite example containing a tiny model of the Tsar's yacht.

The Diamond Fund features the world's biggest gold nugget, weighing 36.2 kg (80 lb).

Top 10 Pushkin Museum of Fine Arts

This stately museum has amassed over 500,000 artworks since its inauguration in 1912. It was envisaged as an educational institution, and was initially filled with plaster casts of sculptural masterpieces along with a world-class selection of Egyptian relics. Subsequent political events led to the expansion of the collection far beyond its original parameters. The Communist policy of nationalizing private property brought many new artworks to the museum; it was further boosted when the government transferred thousands of pieces to it from St Petersburg's Hermitage. The museum's excellent collection of Impressionist, Post-Impressionist and Modernist art is housed next door in a new Gallery of European and American Art of the 19th–20th Century.

- 3 Fayoum Portraits
- 4 Blue Dancers
- 5 Troy Treasure
- 6 Virgin and Child
- 7 Matisse and Picasso Collections
- 8 Bacchanalia
- 9 Rodchenko Collection
- 10 Monet Collection

1 Masterpieces in Plaster

Several rooms of the museum are filled with plaster casts of classic Greek and Roman sculptures (centre) and copies of works by Michelangelo and other Renaissance figures. These were originally intended as models for art students.

2 Hay Wagon

Jean-Baptiste-Camille Corot claimed that the desire to create landscapes outweighed everything else in his life. Painted in 1860, Hay Wagon captures his style as it moves towards Impressionism; light brushstrokes depict the freshness of the rural scene.

3 Fayoum Portraits

Found in the 1870s attached to mummies in the Fayoum region of Egypt, these remarkable portraits (left) demonstrate an extraordinary degree of realism. They were produced as death masks around the 1st century AD and form part of the museum's substantial Egyptian collection.

4 Blue Dancers

Edgar Degas' outstanding 1898 pastel sketch (above), showing the same dancer in multiple poses, illustrates the "random glance" method with which the artist conveyed fleeting impressions of a scene.

8 Bacchanalia

This masterpiece by Peter Paul Rubens is a fine example of 17th-century Baroque painting. It skilfully combines stark contrasts between dark and light with intense realism to hint at the inner passions of the subjects.

10 Monet Collection

Originally part of Sergey Shchukin's private collection, the paintings by Claude Monet span over 30 years and chart the artist's development from the figurative Luncheon on the Grass (1866) to the Impressionistic Rouen Cathedral (1893).

9 Rodchenko Collection

Hundreds of minimalist paintings and experimental photographs by Aleksandr Rodchenko (1891–1956) are on display alongside works by his wife Varvara Stepanova (1894–1958).

5 Troy Treasure

Also called Priam's Treasure, this 4,500-year-old collection of gold and silver dishes, goblets and jewellery was found in the lost city of Troy by German archaeologist Heinrich Schliemann in 1873.

6 Virgin and Child

Despite its missing right-hand panel, this 16th-century work (below) by Lucas Cranach the Elder clearly displays the artist's skills as a leading figure of the German Renaissance. Its high-lights are realism, use of perspective and the subtle inclusion of a cross above the child's head.

7 Matisse and Picasso Collections

In 1948 the gallery acquired works by Henri Matisse and Pablo Picasso from industrialist Sergey Shchukin. Among the prize exhibits are Matisse's Spanish Woman with a Tambourine (1909) and Picasso's Young Acrobat on a Ball (1905).

Looted German Treasure

In 1880 Heinrich Schliemann donated the Fayoum Treasure to Berlin's Imperial Museum. It remained there until 1945, when it disappeared after the city fell to the Red Army. Nothing more was heard about it until it went on display at the Pushkin Museum of Fine Arts in 1993. The treasure remains there despite an official agreement to return it to Germany.

Peter Paul Rubens's Bacchanalia hangs alongside a broad range of Flemish art from the same period.

Bolshoy Theatre

Established in 1776, the Bolshoy theatre and ballet companies are among the oldest in the world. They were based in Moscow's Petrovsky Theatre until 1812, when the building was consumed by fire during Napoleon's invasion. In 1825 the Bolshoy Theatre, designed by Osip Bove (1784–1834), opened to instant international acclaim, but in 1853 it too was claimed by fire. Its restoration was overseen by architect Albert Kavos, who increased the building's height and chose the current decor. Today the Bolshoy retains its status as a world-class ballet and opera venue. The theatre is currently closed for renovation, but performances continue to be staged in the neighbouring New Bolshoy Theatre.

1 Apollo in the Chariot of the Sun

A striking bronze portrayal of Apollo, the God of art, and four flying horses (above) has crowned the Bolshoy's grand portico since 1825. The sculpture also features on the rear of the 100-rouble note.

2 Auditorium

The auditorium, with five elaborate tiers of boxes, has a capacity of 2,150. The decorative scheme features crimson draping, white stucco mouldings and copious amounts of gold leaf; its restoration in 1976 required 6 kg (13 lb) of gold.

3 Beethoven Hall

Opened in 1920 to celebrate Beethoven's 150th anniversary, this hall (below) boasts stuccoed decoration on the ceiling, and walls lined with silk panels.

4 Portico

The stately portico with its eight Ionic columns (above) was part of the 1825 design envisaged by Chief Architect of Moscow city centre, Osip Bove.

5 Imperial Box

Hung with crimson velvet, the lavish royal box (centre) dominates the rear of the hall. Above the box, Russia's imperial crown has replaced the Soviet hammer and sickle.

6 Chandelier

Imported from France in 1863, the 1.5-tonne (3,300-lb) cut-glass chandelier had its candles replaced by 300 electric light bulbs in 1895.

7 Apollo and the Nine Muses

Encircling the central chandelier is a splendid segmented ceiling fresco featuring portraits of Apollo and the nine creative muses (above). It was painted in 1856 and has since been restored.

New Bolshoy Theatre

The New Bolshoy (below), adjacent to the original, was built in a record-breaking six months to host performances while the main theatre is being renovated.

9 Historic Premieres

Among the major premieres staged at the Bolshoy were Tchaikovsky's Swan Lake (1877), Rachmaninoff's Aleko (1893) and Glinka's Ruslan and Ludmila (1842).

10 Historic Events

Renovations 2005–11

Closed since 2005 for a long overdue restoration project, the theatre is due to re-open by 2011. Structural renovation includes sinking deeper foundations to combat subsidence caused by the underground Neglinnaya river. There will also be an overhaul of the auditorium's acoustics, which were severely impaired by poorly executed repairs during Communism.

Osip Bove also designed Teatralnaya Ploshchad (Theatre Square), in Tverskaya, which until then had been a marshy wasteland.

Top 10 Tretyakov Gallery

Starting life in 1856, when Pavel Tretyakov first exhibited his collection of paintings in his front room, the Tretyakov Gallery has since evolved into the world's largest repository of Russian art, with more than 130,000 works. Tretyakov envisioned a gallery for ordinary citizens that would cover the entire spectrum of Russian art. The collection begins with ancient icons painted by anonymous masters, and ends with colourful pre-Revolution works inspired by Fauvism and later condemned by the Communists as degenerate. Works dating from the early 20th century are shown at the nearby New Tretyakov.

Don't be put off by the long queue that often forms outside the entrance at weekends. Groups of around 30 people are let in every 15–20 minutes, so visitors should not have to wait too long.

The gallery has a great café in the basement serving meals and Russian pastries. There is also a restaurant upstairs.

1 Pavel Tretyakov

A wealthy banker, Pavel Tretyakov (1832–98) was passionate about Russian art. His brother Sergey, meanwhile, sought out Western works. By the time of Pavel's death, they had collected over 1,600 works.

2 Icon Collection

The gallery houses several major icon collections (see p22), including works by Dionysius (above) and Rublev. It catalogued and restored numerous icons found in churches closed by the Soviet regime.

3 The Peredvizhniki

Known as "The Wanderers", this group of late-19th-century artists organized travelling shows to bring art to the provinces. The Peredvizhniki were dedicated to depicting everyday Russian life. Members included Ilya Repin, Isaak Levitan and Vasily Surikov.

4 Initial Expansion

By 1872 the Tretyakov art collection had outgrown the family mansion and the building was extended. After Pavel's death, the family moved out and their former quarters were incorporated into the gallery.

5 Museum Church of St Nicholas in Tolmachi

Connected to the main building, this church also serves as a museum. Its highlights include the imposing 17th-century, five-tiered iconostasis and the Vladimir Icon of the Mother of God (see p22), one of Russia's holiest relics.

6 Portrait Collection

Tretyakov set out to create a portrait gallery of eminent Russians and began commissioning and collecting portraits in the 1860s. Leo Tolstoy was one of the subjects.

8 Main Façade

In 1902 the Russian painter and graphic artist Viktor Vasnetsov remodelled the gallery's façade (centre), which centres upon a relief of St George.

7 Treasury

The treasury houses religious exhibits dating from the 12th century, including icon frames and a number of ancient bibles and manuscripts with ornate bindings.

9 New Tretyakov

Although housed in an uninspiring concrete block, the New Tretyakov Gallery (see p89) has a stunning range of paintings and sculptures (above). These together comprise what is today the world's best collection of Soviet art.

Gallery Orientation

The Tretyakov Gallery has 62 rooms on two floors. On entering, visitors descend to the lower lobby for the ticket office and cloakrooms before climbing the main stairs to the gallery's first floor, where the chronological exhibition of paintings begins in Room 1. Steps lead down from the east wing to the ground floor, where the exhibition continues towards the treasury from Room 55 onwards.

10 Future Expansion

In 2008 the gallery's director, Valentin Rodionov, announced plans to double the original gallery's exhibition space and renovate the New Tretyakov building (above). The state has refused to help fund the gallery's 6.5-million Rub (€150-million) expansion project, but Russia's philanthropic oligarchs are expected to cover the cost.

TOP 10 Tretyakov Artists

1 Icon Collection – Theophanes the Greek

An ascetic monk, Theophanes produced Byzantine icons in Moscow and Novgorod in the 14th century. The Transfiguration and The Dormition are typical of his geometrical compositions.

2 Icon Collection – Dionysius

Dionysius, a renowned 15th-century icon painter, is considered to be the founder of the Moscow school of icon painting. The Crucifixion conveys his desire to depict spiritual perfection.

3 Icon Collection – Andrey Rublev

Trained by Theophanes, Rublev is revered as one of Russia's greatest icon painters. In the simple composition The Trinity, he skilfully depicts the three angels who visited Abraham.

The Trinity by Andrey Rublev

4 Icon Collection – Vladimir Icon of the Mother of God

This 12th-century icon, with its haunting image of the Virgin Mary, is among Russia's most venerated relics. It is credited with saving Moscow from attack on several occasions.

5 Icon Collection – Pskov School of Icon Painting

Pskov's icon painters developed a style characterized by a poetic and colourful approach to their subjects, as seen in the simple yet effective colour contrasts of Saints Boris and Gleb.

6 Vrubel Collection

Russia's foremost Symbolist artist, Mikhail Vrubel (1856–1910) painted the monumental Princess of the Dream, which covers an entire wall. Among his works is a ceramic fireplace, Volga and Mikula.

7 Bryullov Collection

The works of Karl Bryullov (1799–1852) are dominated by the vast Siege of Pskov (1831–43), which depicts Russian priests marching against Polish and Lithuanian soldiers in 1581.

8 Levitan Collection

Isaak Levitan (1860–1900) was fascinated by wide vistas and conveyed mood through landscapes such as Whirlpool (1892). The desolate Vladimir Road (1894) depicts the rough track trodden by convicts destined for Siberia.

9 Repin Collection

One of the most moving works by “the Wanderer” Ilya Repin (1844–1930) is Ivan the Terrible and His Son Ivan (1885), which captures Ivan the Terrible’s horror as he realizes he has killed his beloved son.

10 Surikov Collection

Another “Wanderer,” Vasily Surikov (1848–1916) was a master of historic compositions. The Morning of the Execution of the Streltsy (1881) depicts chaotic, emotional scenes filled with a range of fascinating characters.

Top Ten Works of Art

- 1 Bathing the Red Horse (1912) by Kuzma Petrov-Vodkin (1878–1939)
- 2 By the Sea. A Family (1962–4) by Dmitry Zhilinsky (b. 1927)
- 3 A Letter from the Front (1947) by Alexander Lationov (1910–72)
- 4 Josef Stalin and Kliment Voroshilov (1938) by Alexander Gerasimov (1881–1963)
- 5 The Worker and the Collective Farmer (1936) by Vera Mukhina (1899–1953)
- 6 Future Pilots (1938) by Alexander Deyneka (1899–1969)
- 7 Sakko and Vanzetti (1927) by Alexander Tyshler (1898–1980)
- 8 Above the Town (1914–18) by Marc Chagall (1887–1985)
- 9 The Dim (1917) by Vasily Kandinsky (1866–1944)
- 10 Black Suprematic Square (1915) by Kazimir Malevich (1878–1935)

New Tretyakov Gallery

The New Tretyakov Gallery is a 15-minute walk away, housed in the Central House of Artists (see p38). The gallery collection is arranged chronologically, starting with early 20th-century works, such as Bathing the Red Horse, a bold piece by Symbolist painter Kuzma Petrov-Vodkin, and progressing towards the Russian Revolution of 1917 and beyond. During Communism the State strongly supported those artists who produced idealistic Socialist Realism pieces, which “the masses could understand and appreciate”. Many other artistic movements, particularly the avant-garde and, later, Conceptualism, were suppressed and their exponents persecuted. It was not until the collapse of the Soviet Union that gallery curators could show the true scope of 20th-century Soviet art by exhibiting the New Tretyakov’s unsurpassed collection of mainstream and underground works side by side.

Top 10 Metro Stations

Opened in 1935 as part of the government's plan to transform Moscow into the world's capital of Communism, the metro's first stations were conceived as magnificent showcases of Soviet success. Thousands of labourers and genuinely patriotic volunteers dug the tunnels, initially using simple pickaxes and shovels. Today, retaining ubiquitous red stars and original Soviet artworks, the metro is a working museum of Communist design. The system carries 7 million passengers a day and currently has 177 stations on 12 lines.

1 Mayakovskaya (1938)

One of the world's most beautiful metro stations, Mayakovskaya has Art Deco styling and is famous for its 35 superb ceiling mosaics depicting "24 Hours in the Land of the Soviets". It won a grand prize at the 1938 New York World Trade Fair.

2 Ploshchad Revolyutsii (1938)

Stalin's favourite station, Ploshchad Revolyutsii has niches containing 80 life-size bronze sculptures (above) of Soviet citizens. Students rub the noses of the bronze guard dogs for luck before sitting exams.

3 Kropotkinskaya (1935)

Envisaged as the station for the unrealized Palace of the Soviets, Kropotkinskaya was designed to be grand. The central hall has a single broad ceiling supported by two rows of columns.

4 Teatrnaya (1938)

Intended to celebrate culture and the creative arts, the station ceiling is adorned with exquisite porcelain figures depicting dancing men and women from seven of the eleven Soviet republics, all in traditional dress.

5 Komsomolskaya (1952)

This Baroque-style station (centre) has more Communist memorabilia than most. It boasts a bust of Lenin, a delightful mosaic of Lenin addressing a rally outside the Kremlin, and a domed hall with a massive red mosaic star.

6 Taganskaya (1950)

Taganskaya (above) has supporting pylons lined with white marble, each adorned with a ceramic relief depicting a Soviet hero against a sky-blue background.

7 Kievskaya (1954)

This elegant station, which was designed to illustrate Russia's friendship with Ukraine, features massive Ionic-styled pylons adorned with imitation mosaics (below) that depict idyllic scenes of Ukrainian life.

Metro 2 – The Kremlin Line

Although its existence has never been confirmed or denied, most Muscovites believe that, in the 1950s, Stalin ordered the construction of Metro 2, a top-secret line dug deeper than the civilian metro system, intended to link the Kremlin to Vnukovo airport and a network of nuclear bunkers. Branch lines are thought to have been added to connect the Central Committee building, secret locations and civilian buildings, such as Moscow State University (see p97).

8 Novokuznetskaya (1943)

Built during World War II, this magnificent station was intended as a celebration of Russian military prowess and includes dramatic bronze portraits of heroic leaders and some fine ceiling mosaics.

9 Novoslobodskaya (1952)

Novoslobodskaya is famous for its back-lit stained-glass panels, made by Latvian artists, depicting Soviet citizens.

10 Arbatskaya (1953)

Arbatskaya station (left) is on the Arbatsko-Pokrovskaya line, one of the longest and deepest on the metro. Its graceful central hall has a high vaulted ceiling with elaborate ornamentation.

Top 10 Novodevichiy Convent

This splendid UNESCO-listed convent was founded in 1525 to celebrate Grand Prince Basil III's recapture of Smolensk in 1514. Many aristocrats took their vows here and it became known as a nunnery of nobility. Tsarevna Sophia Alexeyevna (1657–1704), who served as a transitional ruler of Russia, ordered the reconstruction of many of the buildings in Moscow Baroque style, with fine ornamentation. The convent was occupied in 1812 by Napoleon's troops, and later used as a female prison before becoming a museum during Communism.

1 Irina Gudunova Chambers Museum

After the death of Tsar Fyodor I (1557–98), his wife Irina entered the convent. Her chambers are now filled with some of the precious treasures and icons bestowed upon Novodevichiy by its wealthy inhabitants.

2 Cathedral of Our Lady of Smolensk

Similar in design to the Kremlin's Cathedral of the Assumption (see pp12–13), this cathedral has high ceilings that enhance its spacious interior (centre). It was consecrated in 1525. The radiant five-tiered iconostasis was donated to the cathedral by Tsarevna Sophia in 1685.

3 Cathedral Frescoes

Painted in the mid-16th century, the frescoes depict biblical figures as well as the Russian princes and holy warriors who brought glory at Smolensk.

4 Church of the Transfiguration

The pretty church, with its five small golden domes (left), was built on a platform above the northern gate in 1688. It is currently used by the resident metropolitan (bishop) for private worship.

5 Six-Tiered Bell Tower

Erected in 1689, the elegant 72-m- (236-ft-) high bell tower (left) is a brilliant example of Moscow Baroque. It originally had chapels on both the ground and first floors, and bells on the third and fifth tiers.

6 Lopukhin Palace

Peter I confined his first wife Tsarina Eudoxia Lopukhina here in 1728. The building was later occupied by Mother Superiors and is now the Metropolitan's residence.

7 Streltsy Guardhouse Museum

Positioned beneath Naprudnaya Tower for use by the convent's Streltsy guards, this low stone building now displays ancient icons and churchware (above).

8 Mariinsky Chambers

Built over four floors with rows of tiny windows, the Mariinskiy Chambers are believed to have been the residence of Tsarevna Sophia until her death in 1704.

10 Famous Graves

Anton Chekhov, interred here in 1904, was one of the first of the cemetery's illustrious residents. Among those who followed him are the writer Mikhail Bulgakov, (1940), film director Sergei Eisenstein (1948), Nikita Khrushchev (1971) and Boris Yeltsin (2007).

9 Novodevichiy Cemetery

Opened in 1898 due to a lack of space within the convent, the cemetery (below) soon became the burial place of choice for Russia's leading cultural figures and politicians.

Unwanted Women

Though it was common practice in Russia for noble women to retire to convents, some were sent against their will. Peter the Great's first wife, Eudoxia Lopukhina, suffered this fate, as did Tsarevna Sophia, who was forced to enter the convent in 1689. In 1698, following two unsuccessful revolts, Sophia was condemned to solitary confinement for the rest of her life.

There are 27,000 graves at Novodevichiy Cemetery, many featuring remarkable headstones and memorial sculptures.

Top 10 Kolomenskoe Estate

Set in idyllic riverside parkland, Kolomenskoe was the favourite summer residence of Ivan the Terrible and was also popular with Tsar Mikhail I (1596–1645). Both leaders made improvements, but it was Tsar Alexei (1629–76) who decided to build his “country Kremlin” here. A fine wooden palace, with an eclectic ensemble of buildings and 270 lavishly furnished rooms, was created in 1667. After Alexei’s death the palace fell into disrepair and was demolished by Catherine the Great (1729–96). Today the estate draws Muscovites, who come to picnic, sledge and attend festivals in the grounds.

4 Kolomenskoe Museum

This museum includes church bells (right), leather-bound books and manuscripts and wood carvings from neglected monasteries and estates in the Moscow region.

5 Festivals

Kolomenskoe hosts a number of annual festivals including Victory Day (9 May). Peter the Great's Birthday (30 May) and Moscow Day (6 Sep) are both celebrated with colourful medieval processions.

6 Church of the Ascension

This UNESCO-listed church (below) was erected to honour the birth of Ivan the Terrible in 1530. It was the first stone structure to include a tented roof, designed to prevent snow piling up.

7 Gardens

Apple, pear and cherry trees fill the 17th-century Voznesenski and Kazanski gardens; the nearby kitchen garden once supplied fresh vegetables to the palace. Ancient oak trees surround Peter the Great's wooden cabin.

8 Church of Our Lady of Kazan

Built in the mid-17th century to mark Moscow's liberation from Poland, this church (centre) features blue domes adorned with golden stars. It was originally linked to Tsar Alexei's wooden palace by a walkway.

Peter the Great's Wooden Cabin

Among the buildings collected for the Museum of Wooden Architecture during the 20th century is a log cabin (right) from Arkhangelsk (on Russia's north coast). Peter the Great stayed in the cabin while overseeing the formation of the Russian navy in 1698.

10 Stable Yard

Tucked away on the eastern side of the estate is a small reconstructed village with stables and caged hawks, where costumed guides give talks and entertain children.

Toy Soldiers

At the age of ten, Peter the Great moved to Kolomenskoe and pursued his interest in military tactics by playing war games with regiments of real soldiers. Seven years later, he foiled a plot by his half-sister Tsarevna Sophia using the loyal soldiers that he had trained as a child.

TOP 10 Moments in Moscow's History

1 First Recorded Reference
Moscow was first mentioned in the Ipatievskaya Chronicles of 1147 when Kiev was the capital of Russia. Moscow was then a minor outpost, reputedly founded by Prince Yuri Dolgoruki.

2 Mongol Invasion
In 1237–8, the fledgling town was burned to the ground and its denizens massacred by Mongol armies under Batu Khan. Under the Mongols, Russian principalities were left to govern themselves and Moscow grew into a powerful city.

3 Reign of Ivan the Great
When Ivan the Great became Grand Prince of Moscow in 1462, the city gained in power and Russian territory was expanded.

Ivan the Great Bell Tower complex, Kremlin

This eventually enabled him to wrest Russia from Mongol control. To celebrate, he invited Italian architects to remodel the Kremlin in 1472.

4 Polish-Muscovite War
In the course of this war (1605–18), Polish and Lithuanian troops succeeded in occupying Moscow in 1610. In 1612 they were routed after Russian volunteer troops from Novgorod, led by Prince Pozharskiy and Kuzma Minin, laid siege to the Kremlin.

5 Capital Relocated
Peter the Great loathed Moscow and in 1713 he moved Russia's capital to his newly constructed city of St Petersburg. Tsars continued to be crowned in Moscow and the city remained culturally and commercially active.

6 Moscow Burns
In 1812 Napoleon conquered Moscow and made a victorious speech on Red Square, but Muscovites set the city ablaze as he advanced and his troops were left without shelter or supplies. As winter set in, Napoleon's army was forced to retreat.

7 Capital Returns
As German forces advanced on St Petersburg in 1918, Lenin feared the collapse of the Bolshevik Revolution and moved Russia's seat of government to Moscow. It was not declared the official capital until 1922.

"Defend Moscow", a 1941 propaganda poster

8 German Invasion

Hitler's invasion of Russia in 1941 took Stalin by surprise. In just a few months, German troops were within 20 km (12 miles) of Moscow. The city was saved by a severe winter for which the invading troops were unprepared.

9 USSR Dissolved

While Mikhail Gorbachev remained President of the Soviet Union, Boris Yeltsin was democratically elected as President of the Russian Federation in June 1991. When hard-line Communists attempted to oust Gorbachev in August 1991, Yeltsin foiled the coup. In the following months he orchestrated the dissolution of the Soviet Union; Gorbachev resigned on 24 December and the Soviet Union ceased to exist.

10 Dubrovka Theatre Siege

In 2002, in this most notorious of several terrorist attacks on Moscow, the theatre and its 850 audience members were seized by Chechen separatists who demanded Russia's withdrawal from Chechnya. In a poorly managed rescue attempt, 39 of the terrorists were killed along with 129 hostages.

Top 10 Great Russian Leaders

1 Dmitriy Donskoy (1359–89)

The first Grand Prince to defeat the Mongols, he built the first stone Kremlin.

2 Ivan the Great (1462–1505)

A powerful leader, he consolidated Russian territory and won freedom from the Mongols.

3 Ivan the Terrible (1547–84)

A formidable leader, his victory at Kazan in 1552 pushed the Mongols further back.

4 Prince Dmitriy Pozharskiy (1578–1642)

Together with Kuzma Minin, Prince Pozharskiy put an end to Russian instability by clearing enemy troops from the Kremlin in 1612.

5 Peter the Great (1682–1725)

This visionary leader created St Petersburg and modernized Russia along Western lines.

6 Catherine the Great (1762–96)

She was respected for her enlightened approach to Russia's modernization.

7 Alexander II (1855–81)

He abolished serfdom and capital punishment.

8 Vladimir Lenin (1917–24)

The orchestrator of the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution and first leader of the USSR.

9 Joseph Stalin (1927–53)

His paranoid purges led to the execution or exile of millions of Soviet citizens.

10 Vladimir Putin (2000–2008)

His leadership brought some stability to Russia.

Tolstoy's incredibly well-preserved winter residence offers an evocative glimpse into the writer's comfortable life with his wife Sophia and their nine children. The house contains the family's original furniture and visitors can view the upstairs study where Tolstoy wrote Resurrection, among other works (see p97).

Left Epiphany Cathedral Right Iconostasis, Church of the Trinity in Nikitniki*TOP 10 Churches and Cathedrals

1 St Basil's Cathedral
Moscow's enchanting landmark cathedral has eight small chapels, all connected by a beautifully tiled gallery and centred on a tent-roofed tower that rises gracefully above their colourful onion domes (see pp8–9).

2 Cathedral of the Assumption
Designed in 1497 by Italian architect Aristotle Fioravanti, this cathedral is a remarkable combination of Russian Orthodox and Renaissance architectural features. With its interior completely covered with 16th-century frescoes, it was a fitting site for the sumptuous coronation and wedding ceremonies of Russia's royalty (see pp12–13).

3 Cathedral of the Archangel
This striking limestone cathedral, topped by a bulbous golden dome, was designed by a Venetian architect in 1505 and combines Western and Eastern architectural motifs. It was used for the burials of Moscow's tsars and princes until the 18th century (see p66).

Tiled gallery, St Basil's Cathedral

4 Cathedral of Christ the Saviour
A replica of the 19th-century original, this magnificent cathedral was opened in 2000. It took ten years to reconstruct, and came in at a final cost of more than £103 million (5 billion Rub) (see p75).

5 Church of St Gregory of Neocaesarea
The delightful Church of St Gregory of Neocaesarea inspired Napoleon to remark in 1812 that he regretted he could not take all of Moscow's beautiful churches back to Paris. Built in the late 17th century, it is crowned with silver onion domes and the tent-roofed bell tower extends onto the pavement (see p91).

6 Kazan Cathedral

This remarkable cathedral was rebuilt in 1993 after the original 17th-century church was demolished by Stalin in 1936 to give parading soldiers better access to Red Square. It was first built to honour the miraculous Icon of the Kazan Virgin, a replica of which is on display inside. ☎ Map M3 • Krasnaya Ploshchad • (495) 298 0131 • Metro: Okhotnyy Ryad • Open 8am–8pm

7 Epiphany Cathedral

This cathedral boasts lavish white ornamentation typical of the Moscow Baroque style. Its small golden dome is supported by a broad hexagonal drum. The restored interior is dominated by a bright gilt iconostasis, which rises into the main tower (see p69).

8 Church of the Trinity in Nikitniki

Flanked by chapels and a tent-roofed bell tower, this is a masterpiece of 17th-century church architecture. The interior contains a superb ornate iconostasis and is covered with original frescoes (see p69).

9 Transfiguration Cathedral

Part of the Novospasskiy monastic complex (see p97), this cathedral was founded in 1491 and rebuilt in 1645 with tall arched gables to resemble the Cathedral of the Assumption. During the Soviet era the monastery was used as a concentration camp, orphanage and furniture factory; the church interior was damaged, but restoration is under way. Surviving frescoes depict biblical scenes, Greek philosophers and Russian royals.

TOP 10 Art Galleries

1 Tretyakov Gallery

An unrivalled collection of pre-1917 Russian art fills over 60 rooms in this labyrinthine gallery. Exhibits include medieval icons, jewellery and church treasures, as well as paintings, drawings and sculptures from every period of Russian history (see pp20–23).

2 Central House of Artists

Occupying the same faceless concrete block as the New Tretyakov Gallery, the Central House of Artists comprises numerous shops and private galleries exhibiting everything from hand-made jewellery to photography and ceramics. The main hall hosts temporary exhibitions and a small cinema regularly screens international art-house films (see p92).

Greek marble sarcophagus, Pushkin Museum of Fine Arts

3 Pushkin Museum of Fine Arts

This grand museum boasts one of Russia's best collections of European art, including plaster casts of classical and Renaissance sculptures, ancient Egyptian portraits and the 4,500-year-old Troy Treasure (see pp16–17).

4 New Tretyakov Gallery

This gallery features some of the best Soviet art of the 20th century. Highlights include Modernist works by Marc Chagall, Kazimir Malevich and Vasily Kandinsky, as well as monumental works of Socialist Realism by artists such as Alexander Gerasimov (see p89).

5 Glazunov Gallery

TOP 10 Russian Writers

1 Pushkin (1799–1837)
Regarded by many as the father of modern Russian literature, Alexander Pushkin most famously wrote Eugene Onegin and Boris Godunov, works which are still performed by Moscow's Bolshoy Opera Company.

Alexander Pushkin attending a court ball

2 Tolstoy (1828–1910)
In epic masterpieces such as War and Peace and Anna Karenina, Leo Tolstoy chronicled 19th-century Russian life with such expressive realism that he became known as one of the world's greatest writers.

3 Dostoevsky (1821–81)
Moscow-born Fyodor Dostoevsky achieved literary fame by the age of 24, but it took four years of hard labour in Siberia for his writing to mature into the dark psychological explorations that earned him a reputation as the founder of modern existentialism.

Statue of Fyodor Dostoevsky

4 Chekhov (1860–1904)
Anton Chekhov studied medicine at Moscow University and continued practising as a doctor even after he achieved literary fame for his short stories and plays. He once declared, "Medicine is my lawful wife and literature is my mistress."

5 Bulgakov (1891–1940)
Though an active novelist and playwright throughout his adult life, Mikhail Bulgakov only achieved international acclaim for his satirical novel The Master and Margarita, which is set in Moscow, after his death.

6 Lermontov (1814–41)
Born in Moscow to an aristocratic family, Mikhail Lermontov began writing successful poetry as a teenager, but was killed in a duel at the age of 26. Although he had only one volume published during his lifetime, he later achieved posthumous recognition for his deeply patriotic poems.

7 Turgenev (1818–83)
A contemporary of Tolstoy and Dostoevsky, Ivan Turgenev lived abroad for much of his life yet continued to write about Russian society. His most famous work, Fathers and Sons,

Ivan Turgenev, author of Fathers and Sons

is a Modernist portrayal of the widening generation gap in Russia.

8 Solzhenitsyn (1918–2008)
Krushchev's unexpected approval of the novel One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich brought Alexander Solzhenitsyn overnight success both in Russia and abroad. The book was based on his experiences of harsh gulag life and won him the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1970. His later works were suppressed and he was exiled in 1974.

9 Nabokov (1899–1977)
Born and raised in Russia, Vladimir Nabokov's aristocratic family fled the country in 1919 after the 1917 Revolution. Nabokov eventually ended up in America, where he wrote the novel Lolita, which brought him international fame.

10 Erofeyev (1938–90)
Venedikt Erofeyev became a literary legend after writing Moskva-Petushki (Moscow Stations) in 1969, which charts a drunkard's surreal journey across Moscow by train. Though it was immediately published abroad, within Russia it could only be obtained as samizdat (illegal copies) until 1989.

Top 10 Russian Composers

1 Glinka (1804–57)
Mikhail Glinka's two great operas – Ivan Susanin and Ruslan and Lyudmila – are still performed at the Bolshoy Theatre (see pp18–19).

2 Mussorgsky (1839–81)
Modest Mussorgsky composed innovative works, often inspired by nationalist themes.

3 Tchaikovsky (1840–93)
Works such as Swan Lake and The Nutcracker have immortalised Pyotr Tchaikovsky as a world-famous composer.

4 Rimsky-Korsakov (1844–1908)
Nikolai Rimsky-Korsakov is best known for his orchestral work, such as Russian Easter Festival Overture.

5 Glazunov (1865–1936)
Conservative yet gifted, Alexander Glazunov wrote his first symphony at 16.

6 Skryabin (1872–1915)
Aleksandr Skryabin was a leading composer of Russian Symbolist works (see p76).

7 Rachmaninov (1873–1943)
A world-class pianist, Sergei Rachmaninov is regarded as one of Russia's greatest Romantic composers.

8 Stravinsky (1882–1971)
Pianist, conductor and legendary composer, Igor Stravinsky was a musical revolutionary.

9 Prokofiev (1891–1953)
Sergei Prokofiev shocked audiences with his modern compositions.

10 Shostakovich (1906–75)
Dmitriy Shostakovich is known as one of the Soviet era's most talented composers.

2 Ministry of Foreign Affairs (1948–53)

This astounding structure, one of the Seven Sisters, was supposedly modelled on Manhattan's skyscrapers. The 27-storey building was designed by architects Mikhail Minkus and Vladimir Gelfreikh (see p77).

3 Moscow State University (1949–53)

Situated on a hill to ensure its prominence, the main university building is the largest of Stalin's seven towers. The design is perfectly symmetrical, with four wings converging on the central tower (see p97).

4 Lenin Library (1928–60)

The Neo-Classical finish of this stately building reflects a compromise between its Constructivist and Classicist architects, who initially failed to agree on its design

TOP 10 Festivals and Events

1 New Year

Muscovites have traditionally celebrated New Year at home, although some head to Red Square to hear the Kremlin bells strike midnight and witness the firework display.

2 Winter Festival

During the Winter Festival (late-Dec-early Jan) Red Square hosts an ice rink and Gorky Park has ice-sculpting displays. There are snowman contests on Ulitsa Arbat, and Troika rides and folk-dancing at Izmaylovo Park.

3 Defenders of the Motherland Day

On 23 February, military parades and wreath-laying ceremonies take place at war memorials all over Russia. It was first celebrated as Red Army Day, to mark Lenin's replacement of the old royal army with an army of workers and peasants in 1918. Today it honours Russia's fallen soldiers.

5 Easter Festival

Moscow's Easter Festival began in 2002

and involves two weeks of classical concerts at locations all around the city. It concludes with a grand outdoor concert in Victory Park to celebrate Victory Day.

6 Women's Day

In 1917 food shortages turned Women's Day celebrations into anti-government protests that eventually led to the Revolution. Ever since, 8 March has been treated with great respect by Russians as a day when both husbands and sons venerate the women in their lives.

7 May Day

Traditionally celebrated with much pomp as Labour Day during the Soviet era, May Day is nowadays seen by radical groups as a chance to let off steam.

8 Victory Day
One of Russia's most important national holidays, this event marks the moment when Nazi Germany surrendered to the Soviet Union and the Allies in Berlin on 9 May. Soldiers, war veterans and civilians join enormous parades at Red Square and Victory Park.

9 Moscow City Day
Held on the first weekend of September, City Day was created by Boris Yeltsin in 1986 to celebrate the birthday of Moscow, which began life as a small fortress in 1147. On the Saturday, colourful floats parade along Ulitsa Tverskaya towards Red Square and there are funfairs and market stalls.

10 Day of Reconciliation
Now held on 7 November, this official holiday started out as Great October Revolution Day, and today it is only celebrated by the Communist Party. Stalinist pensioners can be seen waving portraits of "Uncle Joe" in front of the Lenin Mausoleum (see p63) on Red Square.

4 Ulitsa Arbat

The Arbat was once the hub of Moscow's intelligentsia. Today the pedestrianized street attracts tourists and locals looking for souvenirs, jewellery, and antiques as well as patronizing its restaurants and bars (see p74).

5 Ulitsa Petrovka

Once home to Moscow's aristocratic elite, the majestic 19th-century buildings of Ulitsa Petrovka have long since been taken over by high-class shops and smart restaurants. Opposite the Marriott Tverskaya (see p117) hotel stands the upmarket Petrovskiy Pasazh. This gleaming marble-floored mall, built in 1903, is today the city's premier shopping strip (see p86).

6 Ulitsa Tverskaya

Historically significant as the road that led from the Kremlin to the once-powerful city of Tver and beyond, to St Petersburg, Ulitsa Tverskaya was straightened and widened during the Soviet era and is now lined with shops, restaurants, museums and theatres (see p86).

7 House of Foreign Books
Opened in 1936, this lovely bookshop retains its original wooden floor-to-ceiling shelves, which are filled with over 20,000 foreign-language titles. ## TOP 10 Restaurants

1 Savoy

The Savoy restaurant is as richly decorated today as it was upon opening in 1913. Its opulent Rococo main hall features gilt and marble, as well as plush chairs. The menu covers both Russian and international cuisine (see p73).

2 Tiflis

This is one of the best spots in Moscow to sample Georgian cuisine, a Russian favourite. The lovely outdoor dining area is shaded by trees and vines. The shashlik (skewers of fish, pork, lamb and beef) served here is excellent (see p79).

3 Café Pushkin

The epitome of high-class Moscow, Café Pushkin is evocative of 19th-century Russian society, with liveried waiters, antique furnishings and international cuisine fit for a tsar. The Stone Hall is perhaps the most elegant of the themed rooms here, while the sophisticated Library has great views of Tverskoy Bulvar (see p87).

4 Red Square

Located within the Historical Museum (see p63), this fine restaurant specializes in reproducing recipes once served to royalty. The menu incorporates anecdotal descriptions of dishes, such as solianka (a spicy meat soup), which dates back to the 10th century (see p67).

5 Uzbekistan

This restaurant is one of Moscow's oldest, dating from 1951. Its carved wooden doors lead into an opulent interior of oriental carpets and chandeliers. Belly dancers offer entertainment, peacocks strut about in

It also has superb views of the Cathedral of Christ the Saviour (see p75). ☎ Map L5 • 5 Soymonovskiy proezd • (495) 290 1217 • Metro: Kropotkinskaya • RRRR

7 Oblomov

Housed in a grand old mansion refurbished in 19th-century imperial style, Oblomov serves up traditional Russian dishes, accompanied by an impressive wine list. Diners can relax with hookah pipes in a Middle Eastern-style attic area and there is also a pleasant outdoor terrace (see p93).

8 Dorian Gray

Highly regarded for the consistent quality of its cuisine, Dorian Gray is popular with the city's elite. Rumour has it that this is one of Vladimir Putin's favourite restaurants. The Sicilian chef's tiramisu is legendary (see p93).

9 Artists' Gallery

This restaurant is testament to the phenomenal artistic output of its owner, Zurab Tsereteli (see p76), whose canvases adorn the walls of several themed dining rooms. The cuisine is a blend of European and

The Kremlin and Red Square

MOSCOW'S HISTORIC CENTRE is the obvious starting point for tours of this ancient city, which started life as a 12th-century citadel enclosed by wooden walls. Today the Kremlin, with its magnificent ensemble of palaces and cathedrals, is home to the Russian president. Despite limited public access, it leaves a powerful impression of the country's colourful past. Neighbouring Red Square, long used for public ceremonies and parades, continues to be a focal point of city life, adorned with the iconic domes of St Basil's Cathedral.

1 St Basil's Cathedral

Moscow's most fanciful landmark was built in the 16th century to mark the conquest of Kazan, which effectively ended centuries of Mongolian Tatar rule in Russia. Combining motifs from Kazan's mosque with elements of Russian Orthodox style, the cathedral's design is a triumphant fusion of East and West, symbolic of Russia's victory (see pp8–9).

2 Lenin Mausoleum

The imposing granite mausoleum was designed by the acclaimed Russian architect Aleksey Shchusev in 1930. Visitors are not permitted to linger beside the crystal casket containing Lenin's embalmed body, prompting rumours that it is a wax replica, but the authorities insist that a special chemical formula developed by Soviet scientists has preserved him to this day. ☎ Map N3 • Krasnaya Ploshchad • Metro: Okhotnyy Ryad, Ploshchad Revolyutsii • Open 10am–1pm Tue–Thu, Sat–Sun

3 Historical Museum

Founded in 1872, this museum has amassed an incredible collection of over 4.5 million objects, of which around 22,000 are on permanent display. The exhibition begins with traces of early Palaeolithic man and goes on to chart Russian history through the ages. Its neatly arranged displays of fascinating artifacts include a 7.5-m (24.5-ft) Neolithic dug-out canoe, a massive marble sarcophagus from the 4th century BC and a large wooden globe produced by Dutch cartographers and acquired by Peter the Great in 1697. ☎ Map M3 • Krasnaya Ploshchad 1 • (495) 692 4019 • Metro: Okhotnyy Ryad, Ploshchad Revolyutsii • Open 10am–6pm Mon–Sat, 11am–8pm Sun • Adm • www.shm.ru

4 Kremlin Wall Graves

The section of Kremlin wall behind Lenin's mausoleum was first used as a necropolis in 1917 when the bodies of 238 Bolshevik revolutionary fighters were buried in mass graves there. Since then over 100 Soviet heroes have had their ashes interred in the wall and marked with plaques. Twelve Soviet statesmen, including every leader except Khrushchev, are honoured with individual tombs. ☎ Map M3 • Krasnaya Ploshchad • Metro: Biblioteka im. Lenina, Okhotnyy Ryad

Festival of Torture

Some of Ivan the Terrible's worst excesses took place publicly in Red Square on 25 June 1570 during what was to become known as the Festival of Torture. Ivan spent the day "entertaining" onlookers by torturing 180 prisoners convicted of conspiring against him, employing hot pincers, ropes tautened so as to splice bodies in half, and a human-sized frying pan.

5 State Armoury

The Armoury's stunning collection is housed in a grand building that was designed in 1844 by Konstantin Ton (1794–1881). Besides ornately decorated armoury from Russia, Europe and the Far East, the museum exhibits precious items once coveted by Russia's ruling classes (see pp14–15).

6 GUM

One of Moscow's major landmarks, GUM (State Department Store) was built in the late 19th century on a site where market stalls had existed since the 15th century. It consists of three parallel halls faced with polished marble and covered with a glass roof designed by engineering genius Vladimir Shukhov (1853–1939). The mall is now privately owned and has around 200 high-end boutiques, cafés and food stores. 📍 Map N3

9 Faceted Palace
Off limits to the public today, this palace was built by Italian architects in the 15th century and owes its name to its Renaissance-style faceted stone façade. An external staircase leads up to a richly painted chamber that occupies the entire upper floor. This was once the royal throne room, but in recent years it has been used as a banquet hall for visiting dignitaries. Map M4

A Tour Around the Heart of Moscow

Morning

Start at Okhotnyy Ryad metro station and walk towards the Kremlin, passing Kilometre Zero (see p11) and pausing to admire the tiny Iverskaya Chapel where royal visitors used to pray before passing through Resurrection Gate (see p11) and into Red Square. Just to the right is the Historical Museum (see p63), while to the left is Kazan Cathedral (see p37). Leave bags and cameras in the Historical Museum's cloakroom before joining the queue for the Lenin Mausoleum (see p63) and Kremlin Wall Graves (see p63). Walk south towards St Basil's Cathedral (see p63) before entering the narrow passages linking its chapels, pausing to admire its symmetry from its western side.
 For a light lunch try Bosco Café (see p67).

Afternoon

Exit Red Square via Resurrection Gate and turn left past the Statue of Marshal Zhukov (see p10) and into Alexander Gardens (see p66) beneath the Kremlin wall. Keep walking until you reach the causeway connecting the Kremlin to Kutafya Tower, where tickets for the State Armoury (see pp14–15) and Kremlin buildings are sold separately. Visit the State Armoury, where tickets are sold for the Diamond Fund (see p15).

1 Church of the Trinity in Nikitniki

A fine example of Moscow's 17th-century architecture, this glorious church was endowed by local nobleman Grigoriy Nikitnikov and built on his estate from 1634 to 1654. Its modest size is compensated by the elaborate exterior decoration, with its five onion-domed cupolas perched above tiers of arched niches known as kokoshniki. During Communism the church was turned into a museum, but the interior has now been restored and the bold frescoes, by Simon Ushakov, are once again in pristine condition.

2 Ulitsa Varvarka

Counted amongst Moscow's oldest streets, Ulitsa Varvarka is named after St Varvara Church, one of several along its length. The street and its churches are almost all that remain of historic Zaryadye, a bustling quarter of artisans and traders that was flattened by Soviet city planners. Under Communism, all the churches were closed and transformed into museums, concert halls, or residential quarters.

3 Mayakovsky Museum

Vladimir Mayakovsky (1893–1930) was one of Russia's leading Futurist artists and poets. Inspired by the October Revolution of 1917, he developed a style that he named Communist Futurism, and for a time produced propaganda posters and poetry, which earned him official approval. However, by his mid-30s, Mayakovsky had become disillusioned with his two great passions – love and Communism – and on 14 April 1930 he shot himself. The museum celebrates his life with sculptures, photographs, poetry, pictures and posters. • Map P2 • Lubyanskiy Prospekt 3/6 • (495) 621 9560 • Metro: Lubyanka • Open 1–9pm Thu, 10am–6pm Fri–Tue • Adm • www.museum.ru/majakovskiy

4 Epiphany Cathedral

This cathedral, replete with intricate white stone ornamentation, was completed in 1696. It belonged to one of Moscow's oldest monasteries and was originally surrounded by monks' cells and an abbot's residence. The monastery was founded in the 13th century and thrived for several centuries under the patronage of successive tsars, but was closed by the Communists, who used it to accommodate labourers building the city's metro system. The cathedral was re-opened for religious services in 1991. • Map N3 • Bogoyavlenskiy pereulok • Metro: Ploshchad Revolyutsii • Open 10am–7pm

Ex-Rossiya Hotel

The great space beyond Ulitsa Varvarka, which once comprised the Zaryadye district, was originally created over 50 years ago to make way for Stalin's eighth skyscraper (see p46), a project that never took shape. The site lay empty until the 1960s when it was filled by one of the Soviet era's ugliest buildings: the 3,000-room Hotel Rossiya, which was demolished in 2007.

5 Moscow City Museum

This museum was housed in the 17th-century Sukharov Tower until the Communists destroyed the building in 1934. The collection of photographs, ancient maps, antique jewellery and other exhibits was then transferred to its current location – a 19th-century church that had been closed by the atheistic government. ☎ Map N2 • Novaya Ploshchad 12 • (495) 624 8490 • Metro: Lubyanka • Open 10am–6pm Tue, Thu–Sat; 11am–7pm Wed, Sun • Adm • www.mosmuseum.ru

6 Old English Court

In 1553, English merchants seeking a northern sea passage to China got as far as Murmansk, from where they sledged 2,000 km (1,240 miles) to Moscow. Impressed by their bravery and keen to establish trade relations with the West, Ivan the Terrible granted them trade rights and the use of what became known as the Old English Court. The museum offers a glimpse into historic diplomatic relations between England and Russia.

8 Choral Synagogue

Largely funded by banker Lazar Polyakov, the construction of this splendid synagogue began in 1887, but was abandoned after Moscow's governor ordered the expulsion of all but 5,000 Jews in 1891. It was not completed until 1906. With a lovely Moorish-style interior, the synagogue draws the city's growing Jewish community.

9 Palace of the Romanov Boyars

This palace was home to the Romanov family before they moved into the Kremlin after Michael (1596–1645) became the first Romanov tsar in 1613. It was then neglected until the 1850s when Nicholas I (1796–1855) had it restored and opened as a museum. The splendidly furnished men's quarters are on the ground floor; the women would weave and embroider in the rooms upstairs. 📍 Map N3

10 Polytechnical Museum

This is one of Moscow's most engaging museums, with a fascinating array of exhibits displayed over four vast floors in an imposing 19th-century building. The basement has a fine collection of antique cars, bicycles and motorbikes, including a Penny Farthing and a rare 1915 Triumph N motorbike, while the upper floors are occupied by themed exhibitions. 📍 Map N2 • Novaya Ploshchad 3/4 • (495) 624 7356 • Metro: Lubyanka • Open 10am–6pm Tue, Thu, Sat–Sun; 11am–7pm Wed, Fri • Adm • www.polymus.ru

A Day in Kitay Gorod

Morning

🕒 Arriving at Kitay Gorod metro station, follow exit signs for Slavyanskiy Ploshchad. Once outside, head for the small green domes of Church of St George on the left side of Ulitsa Varvarka (see p69). From here cross over to Ipatievskiy pereulok and turn right for the stunning Church of the Trinity in Nikitniki (see p69) on Nikitnikov pereulok. Retrace your steps to St George's Church and continue west following signs to the Palace of the Romanov Boyars for a glimpse of medieval aristocratic life. Continue to the Old English Court before emerging onto Red Square at the end of Ulitsa Varvarka. Opposite stands the grand Gostiny Dvor shopping mall (see p53), where the Amsterdam Café makes a great spot for lunch.

Afternoon

From Gostiny Dvor head east away from the Kremlin along Ulitsa Ilinka and turn left onto Novaya Ploshchad, where you can visit the vast Polytechnical Museum, or the smaller Moscow City Museum opposite. Head up the street towards Lubyanka Ploshchad, home to the infamous ex-KGB headquarters. The Mayakovsky Museum (see p69) is on nearby Lubyanskiy proezd. The well-stocked Biblio Globus bookshop stands on adjoining Ulitsa Mayasnitskaya. For dinner you can either try GlavPivTorg (see p73) on the corner of Ulitsa Bolshaya Lubyanka, or splash out at the chic Dissident (see p73).

At the Polytechnical Museum, look out for the “radiogramophone” presented to Stalin by Latvian workers in 1950.

Arbatskaya

RADIATING WEST FROM THE CENTRE, Ulitsas Arbat and Prechistenka are two of Moscow's oldest streets. Both are lined with fine 19th-century mansions, built after the great fire that consumed most of the city's wooden architecture during Napoleon's invasion in 1812. The district became fashionable at this time, and wealthy aristocrats moved in along with a bohemian circle of artists, poets, musicians and writers who frequented Ulitsa Arbat's cafés and bars. After the six-lane Novyy Arbat was created in the 1960s, Ulitsa Arbat lost its importance and was neglected until the 1980s, when pedestrianization brought a new lease of life. Today the district boasts major museums, galleries and churches as well as shops, restaurants, clubs and bars.

1 Ulitsa Arbat

Since its pedestrianization, Ulitsa Arbat has become a bustling tourist attraction, lively with portrait painters, buskers and souvenir stalls. Along its length are several museum houses, a tiled Peace Wall designed by 7,000 children in 1990, statues of the poet Alexander Pushkin and his wife, and a bronze effigy of Bulat Okudzhava (1924–97) – a legendary underground poet and folk singer who immortalized the street with his song My Arbat. ☉ Map K4 • Metro: Arbatskaya

2 Glazunov Gallery

Occupying two floors of a 19th-century mansion, this gallery holds 3,000 paintings by Ilya Glazunov (b. 1930), a prolific artist and Rector of the Russian Academy of Painting, Sculpture and Architecture. Evocative pieces include Decline (2001), which portrays a drunk accordion player illuminated by a blood-red sun, and The Great Experiment (1990), featuring past and present political leaders, who look on while Moscow burns. ☉ Map L5 • Ulitsa Volkhonka 13 • (495) 291 6949 • Metro: Kropotkinskaya • Open 11am–7pm Tue–Sun • Adm • www.glazunov.ru

3 Pushkin Museum of Fine Arts

Home to the country's best collection of European art, the Pushkin Museum of Fine Arts complex has an exhibition of Ancient Egyptian Art and several halls of plaster cast copies of classical and Renaissance sculptures (see pp16–17). The gallery's remarkable collection of Impressionist, post-Impressionist and Modernist paintings, including a large number of works by Pablo Picasso and Henri Matisse, are displayed in the adjacent Gallery of European and American Art of the 19th–20th Century (see pp16–17).

4 Cathedral of Christ the Saviour

Tsar Alexander I commissioned the construction of Russia's largest Orthodox cathedral to mark the defeat of Napoleon in 1812. It was designed by the Russian architect Konstantin Ton (1794–1881) and completed in 1860, but was demolished in 1931 to make way for the Palace of the Soviets. That plan was later abandoned and in 1960, the spot was filled by the world's largest outdoor swimming pool. A fundraising campaign to rebuild the original cathedral followed the fall of Communism in 1991, and the existing replica was finished by 2000. ☉ Map L5 • Ulitsa Volkhonka 15 • Metro: Kropotkinskaya • Open 10am–5pm • www.xxc.ru

5 Skryabin House Museum

The small mansion where Symbolist composer Aleksandr Skryabin (1872–1915) lived for three years before his death was opened as a state museum in 1922. On display is the ingenious coloured-light projector that Skryabin created for use with his Prometheus symphony. The museum hosts regular concerts at which Bechstein's custom-made grand piano can be heard.

Bulat Okudzhava (1924–97)

Poet, singer and novelist Bulat Okudzhava became a legend in his own lifetime through the illegal distribution of his songs during the Soviet era; he is famous for his lyrics in the classic Russian film White Sun of the Desert (1969). Though he was careful not to criticize the regime overtly, his music was never recognized by the authorities.

7 Tolstoy Literary Museum

Established by the Tolstoy Society in 1911, a year after the author's death, this museum occupies a classically styled mansion designed by Afanasy Grigoriev in 1817. Its elegant rooms are filled with original copies of Tolstoy's manuscripts, first editions, photographs and personal effects. The collection includes The Complete Works of Tolstoy in 90 volumes, only available in Russian. 📍 Map K5 • Ulitsa Prechistenka 11 • (495) 202 2190

10 Ministry of Foreign Affairs
One of Moscow's formidable Seven Sisters (see pp46–7), the 172-m- (564-ft-) high Ministry of Foreign Affairs is a typical example of Stalinist design, and towers ominously over most of the surrounding buildings. Constructed between 1948 and 1953, it was initially flat roofed, but at Stalin's suggestion a metal spire was hastily added to bring its profile in line with those of its Sisters. 📍 Map J5 • Smolenskaya–Sennaya Plushchad 32–34 • Metro: Smolenskaya

A Day Exploring Arbatskaya

Morning

🕒 Arriving at Kropotkinskaya, (see p24) stop to admire the station's spacious interior. Exit the station and head south towards the nearby Cathedral of Christ the Saviour (see p75). Interior lifts whisk visitors up to the rooftop where glass galleries afford splendid views of the city. Next, stop at the small restaurant beside Kropotkinskaya station for coffee before visiting the Pushkin Museum of Fine Arts (see p75) across the road to the right. If it's a weekend or a holiday, be prepared for a long queue. If time is short, go across the street to visit the far smaller Glazunov Gallery (see p75) instead. After visiting the galleries, have lunch and a cocktail at the Wall Street Bar (see p78) before taking the metro to Smolenskaya.

Afternoon

At Smolenskaya note the station's theme of Russian military triumphs before exiting beneath the imposing Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Behind it stands a pair of Soviet-era hotels covered with state-of-the-art neon lighting. Begin walking along Ulitsa Arbat, pausing at the Pushkin House Museum. A right turn will take you to Melnikov House, a fascinating piece of avant-garde architecture. Return to Ulitsa Arbat to have your portrait painted or shop for souvenirs. Dine at the historic Praga restaurant (see p79) next to Arbatskaya Plushchad, or head for Elki-Palki (see p78) on Novyy Arbat for traditional Russian fare.

Tverskaya

THIS VIBRANT DISTRICT takes its name from Ulitsa Tverskaya, the historic street used by royal processions travelling from the Kremlin to the once-powerful city of Tver. It has long been both a thriving commercial centre and fashionable residential district. Although it was one of the few quarters to escape significant damage during the Fire of Moscow in 1812, its original wooden architecture was replaced in the late 19th century by elegant apartment blocks and mansions, which now stand side-by-side with anonymous concrete housing and office blocks erected during the Soviet era.

Sumptuous interior of the Bolshoy Theatre

1 Bolshoy Theatre

The Bolshoy, one of the city's most famous landmarks, is undergoing major repairs to restore it to its full glory, and is expected to be fully open by 2011. In the meantime, its world-class opera and ballet companies continue to thrill audiences in the adjacent New Bolshoy Theatre, with their performances of classics such as Don Quixote and Eugene Onegin, as well as new productions (see pp18–19).

2 Museum of Modern Art

Most of this substantial collection of Russian modern art belongs to prolific artist and director of the Russian Academy of Arts, Zurab Tsereteli, who opened the museum with the backing of Yuri Luzhkov, the mayor of Moscow. Housed in an 18th-century building designed by Russian architect Matvey Kazakov, the gallery exhibits works by Pablo Picasso and Joan Miro, as well as Russian modernists including Kazimir Malevich and Wassily Kandinsky. ☎ Map M1 • Ulitsa Petrovka 25 • (495) 694 2890 • Metro: Chekhovskaya • Open noon–8pm • Adm (free Mon–Wed) • www.mmoma.ru

3 Museum of Modern History

Charting the country's history from the early 19th century to the present, the museum's collection fills the extravagant halls of a mansion once known as the English Club, a high-class meeting place for foreigners in pre-Revolution Moscow. Among the exhibits is military equipment dating back to the disastrous Russo-Japanese War of 1904–5, and weapons used in street fights during the 1905 Russian Revolution. The exhibition culminates with a proud display of the country's recent industrial successes.

4 Moscow Art Theatre

Founded in 1898 by method acting pioneer Konstantin Stanislavski (1863–1938) and playwright Vladimir Nemirovich-Danchenko (1858–1943), the Moscow Art Theatre earned its reputation through successful performances of Maxim Gorky's early plays and Anton Chekhov's play The Seagull. Today the theatre puts on a broad repertoire of Russian and international plays. The upstairs theatre museum displays costumes and props used in 20th-century productions. ☎ Map M2 • Kamergerskiy pereulok 3 • (495) 629 8760 • Metro: Teatralnaya, Okhotnyy Ryad • Open 11am–7pm (ticket office) • Adm • <http://art.theatre.ru>

Ancient Tver

The medieval citadel of Tver lay 170 km (106 miles) northwest of Moscow and came close to eclipsing the capital in the 14th century, but ultimately yielded to its rival after suffering successive defeats. In 1941 it was burned to the ground by Nazi forces, and though it has since been rebuilt, no trace of its grand history remains.

8 Bulgakov Museum
The former flat of Russia's celebrated author Mikhail Bulgakov (1891-1940) has long been a pilgrimage site for his fans and was recently turned into a museum. Bulgakov lived here from 1921 to 1924, and this is where he wrote the draft of his epic novel The Master and Margarita, in which he incorporated the number 50 (his own apartment number) as the address of the devil's residence. The museum contains personal effects, photographs and copies of his manuscripts. ☎ Map K1 • Ulitsa Bolshaya Sadovaya 10, Apt 50 • (495) 699 5366 • Metro: Mayakovskaya • Open 1-11pm Sun-Thu, 1pm-1am Fri-Sat • Adm

9 Chekhov House Museum

Though Anton Chekhov (1860–1904) lived in this modest house for only four years between 1886 and 1890, he is thought to have written some of his best works here. Despite early success as a writer, he continued practising as a doctor and his consultation rooms have been preserved within the museum. Other exhibits include some first editions of his books and an array of colourful posters announcing performances of his plays at the Moscow Art Theatre. 📍 Map J2 • Ulitsa Sadovaya-Kudrinskaya 6 • (495) 691 6154 • Metro: Barrikadnaya • Open 11am–6pm Tue, Thu, Sat–Sun; 2–9pm Wed, Fri

10 Gorky House Museum

A magnificent example of Art Nouveau architecture, Gorky House is a visual feast of flowing asymmetrical motifs. It was given to writer and Soviet propagandist Maxim Gorky (1868–1936) by Stalin upon the writer's return to the Soviet Union in 1931. Gorky's library, letters, manuscripts and some personal belongings are all on display. 📍 Map K2 • Ulitsa Malaya Nikitskaya 6/2 • (495) 690 0535 • Metro: Tverskaya • Open 11am–6pm Wed–Sun

A Day Out in Historic Tverskaya

Morning

🕒 Start at Okhotnyy Ryad metro station and head away from the Kremlin along Ulitsa Tverskaya, passing the grand Le Royal Meridian National (see p116), on your left, where Lenin stayed after the Russian Revolution. To the right is the State Duma building. A little further on is Kamergersky pereulok, where a statue of Chekhov stands outside the Moscow Art Theatre (see p83). Visit the theatre museum upstairs. Return to Ulitsa Tverskaya and continue towards the Maki Café on Glinitchevskiy pereulok for a cup of herbal tea before heading for the historic Yeliseyevskiy Food Hall (see p86) on Ulitsa Tverskaya to admire its architecture. Further up the street is the Museum of Modern History (see p83) which has a café where you can stop for lunch.

Afternoon

🕒 Head east along Strastnoy Bulvar past Pushkinskaya Ploshchad and the Soviet-era Pushkinskiy cinema to reach the Upper Monastery of St Peter. The Museum of Modern Art (see p83) stands opposite. From there, stroll down Ulitsa Petrovka past trendy boutiques and pre-Revolution mansions, looking out for the Petrovskiy Pasazh, on the left, with its chic boutiques and a café. You can either return to Ulitsa Petrovka and visit the Gulag Museum and the Bolshoy Theatre (see p83), or continue through Petrovskiy Pasazh and turn left onto Ulitsa Neglinnaya. Relax at the Sanduny Bath House, a short walk away.

Zamoskvoreche

ZAMOSKVORECHE WAS SETTLED in the 15th century by merchants and artisans, and many of its streets still bear the names of their trades. Prone to flooding, much of the land was given over to industry and farming. During the 19th century a canal was dug to prevent the floods and several large estates were established. These were built by wealthy merchants, such as the Tretyakov brothers and Aleksey Bakhrushin, who contributed enormously to the flourishing cultural scene for which Zamoskvoreche remains known today.

1 Tretyakov Gallery

Spanning Russian art history from the earliest medieval icons to Impressionist works of the late 19th century, the Tretyakov Gallery boasts a phenomenal collection (see pp20–23).

2 New Tretyakov Gallery

This 20th-century collection brings together officially accepted Socialist Realism artworks and pieces produced “underground” in the same period, by artists who were sidelined as a result of their refusal to compromise. The gallery occupies several floors of the concrete block it shares with the Central House of Artists (see p92). Rumour has it that the government plans to replace the building with an ultra-modern complex in the shape of a peeled orange, designed by controversial UK architect Lord Foster.

3 Church of the Resurrection in Kadashi

Funded by public subscription in the 17th century, this glorious Moscow Baroque church has recently undergone major restoration, following the eviction of the furniture factory that had occupied it since 1964. The church earlier fell victim to Napoleon’s troops, who stabled their horses here before setting fire to the building upon their retreat in 1812. Work is currently underway on restoration of the interior but, paradoxically, property developers have been granted permission to build a luxury residential complex that will surround the church on three sides. 📍 Map N5 • 2-oy Kadashevskiy pereulok 7 • Metro: Novokuznetskaya • Open 6–8pm

4 Ostrovskiy House Museum

Surrounded by pleasant gardens, this charming house is where Russian Realist playwright Aleksandr Ostrovskiy (1823–86) was born and raised. Ostrovskiy gained fame for his early satirical comedies and later penned over 47 plays, which were performed at Moscow’s Maly Theatre. His play The Snow Maiden has been in the Bolshoy Opera Company’s repertoire since 2002. A rare example of Moscow’s 19th-century wooden architecture, the house is filled with manuscripts, photographs and the family’s furniture.

On the footbridge linking Lavrushinskiy pereulok with Balchug Island is a delightful sight: a series of metal trees festooned with padlocks. ## 9 Historic Mosque

Permission to construct Moscow's oldest mosque was granted in 1823, on condition that no minarets were added. In 1936, the Soviet regime executed the mosque's imam (prayer leader) and went on to turn the building into a printing factory. The mosque re-opened in 1993 and today serves some of Moscow's 1-million-strong Muslim community. Map P5 • Ulitsa Tatarskaya 28 • Metro: Novokuznetskaya • Open 7am–10pm

10 Church of St Gregory of Neocaesarea

Tsar Alexis ordered the construction of this ornate church in 1668 upon the site of a 15th-century chapel. A famous "peacock eye" frieze encircles the roof, while inside is a gilt iconostasis and a copy of the miraculous icon of Our Lady of Kykkos. Closed during Communism, the church re-opened in 1996. Map M6 • Ulitsa Bolshaya Polyanka • Metro: Polyanka • Open 8am–7:30pm

An Art-Lover's Tour of Zamoskvoreche

Morning

Start at Park Kultury metro station and cross the Moskva river over Krymskiy Bridge. From here Tsereteli's Peter the Great statue is visible to your left, as is the Cathedral of Christ the Saviour (see p75). Cross the river and descend the steps towards the concrete building that houses the Central House of Artists and the New Tretyakov Gallery (see p89). Have lunch at the Central House of Artists' smart café before exploring the Socialist Sculpture Park. If you prefer being outside, bypass the galleries and turn right under the underpass (lined with art stalls) towards the arched entrance to Gorky Park, which has plenty of places to eat and relax. In summer, boats operate city tours from the Gorky Park river station.

Afternoon

From Gorky Park continue along Krymskiy val to Oktyabrskaya metro station. Take the metro to Tretyakovskaya and spend an afternoon at the nearby Tretyakov Gallery. Its café makes a good snack stop. Continue up Lavrushinskiy pereulok towards the river, pausing to admire the Church of the Resurrection in Kadashi (see p89), before crossing the Lovers' Bridge. Follow the river west towards the Peter the Great statue. The large building across the Maly Kamenny bridge was once home to the famous Red October Chocolate Factory and is now partially used by the ArtStrelka Gallery (see p92) to host contemporary art shows.

From the Socialist Sculpture Park you can see Zurab Tsereteli's striking statue of Peter the Great, set on an island in the river.

Greater Moscow

ENSCONCED BETWEEN THE FEATURELESS MASS of Soviet housing estates cluttering the suburbs beyond Moscow's Garden Ring are a surprising number of green spaces and tourist attractions, perfect for brief escapes from the hectic city centre. Many of the parks were once home to the grand summer estates of Moscow's aristocratic elite; they conceal architectural gems, such as the palaces of Ostankino and Kuskovo, which have been preserved as museums. South of the city are several fortified monasteries and convents, some founded as early as the 13th century; these shelter pretty churches and cathedrals behind formidable walls, built to defend the city from invading Poles, Tatars and Mongols.

5 All-Russian Exhibition Centre (VVTs)

First opened in 1939 to showcase the USSR's agricultural achievements, this centre soon became a focal point for exhibitions. Over 80 massive pavilions were constructed, each adorned with Soviet sculptures and dedicated to a particular field of technology. Today many of the pavilions have been turned into shops, and amusement parks provide an added attraction. ☎ Map B1 • Mira Prospekt • Metro: VDNKh • Open 9am–7pm (grounds), 10am–6pm (pavilions)

6 Victory Monument and Museum of the Great Patriotic War

Opened in 1995 to mark the 50th anniversary of the end of the Great Patriotic War (World War II), this vast memorial museum is watched over by a sculpture of Nike, set on top of a 141-m (463-ft) obelisk that dominates the centre of Victory Park. Within the museum grounds is an exhibition of military vehicles and equipment. ☎ Map A2 • Kutuzovskiy Prospekt • (495) 449 8159 • Metro: Kutuzovskaya • Open 10am–7pm Tue–Sun • Adm

7 Lyublino Estate

This idyllic estate was bought by Nikolai Durasov in 1800 and developed into a grand complex of buildings. The centrepiece of his magnificent mansion is the Circular Hall, which features a fine ceiling painting, The Triumph of Venus, and remarkable trompe l'oeil murals. Durasov hosted balls and banquets in the neighbouring Marble Hall. ☎ Map B2 • Ulitsa Letnya 1 • (495) 350 1553 • Metro: Volga • Open 7am–6pm Tue–Sun • Adm

8 Novospasskiy Monastery

Founded within the Kremlin in the 14th century, Novospasskiy Monastery was relocated to its current position, on the bank of the Moskva river, in 1491, on the orders of Ivan the Great (1440–1505). There it formed part of the city's southern defences. The monastery's walls were erected in the 17th century when the Romanov family adopted the pretty Transfiguration Cathedral

The Battle of Borodino

Russian troops met Napoleon's army in Borodino on 7 September 1812. Both sides suffered major casualties during the battle, which culminated with the strategic withdrawal of Russian troops. By burning much of Moscow as they retreated, the Russians left their enemies without supplies as winter closed in. The French were soon forced to abandon the city.

On completion in 1953, the university was Europe's tallest building. Its spire rises 240 m (790 ft) and is crowned by an 11,980-kg (13-ton) star ringed by carved ears of wheat. The four massive wings, containing over 6,000 dormitory-style rooms, are adorned by a clock, thermometer and barometer that were once the world's largest. The interior is richly decorated with marble panelling, mosaics and sculptures. Map A2 • Universitetskaya Ploshchad • Metro: Vorobyovy Gory • www.msu.ru

A Day of Museums and Monuments

Morning

Starting at Pobedy Park metro station, cross under Kutuzovskiy Prospekt and head towards the Victory Monument – an obelisk in that marks the location of the Museum of the Great Patriotic War. Explore the exhibition and, if there is time, wander through the park. Otherwise, retrace your steps and cross to the other side of Kutuzovskiy Prospekt. Walk past the Triumphal Arch, built to mark Russia's victory over Napoleon and now marooned between traffic lanes. Just beyond is the Borodino Panorama Museum, fronted by a statue of General Kutuzov, who led the Russian forces in the Great Patriotic War. Have lunch at Bocconcino (see p99) in the shopping mall just beyond Park Pobedy metro, before taking a metro ride to VDNKh.

Afternoon

From VDNKh station walk past the magnificent Monument to the Conquerors of Space (see p47) towards the monumental entrance gates of the All-Russian Exhibition Centre. Here, outside the old Space Pavilion, is the star exhibit – a Vostock rocket similar to that used by Yuri Gagarin, the first man in space, to circle the earth in 1961. Explore the exhibition centre or exit the main gates and bear right towards Ulitsa Ostankinskaya and the delightful 18th-century Ostankino Palace (see p98). Cross the road to the Kosmos hotel (see p114), which contains several good restaurants as well as a ten-lane bowling alley.

TOP 10 Planning Your Visit

1 When to Go

Moscow has mild summers and cold, but often sunny, winters. The best time to visit is from June to September, when temperatures rise to around 18°C (64°F). They drop to an average of -7°C (44°F) between December and March.

2 What to Pack

Bring plenty of layers in winter, such as thermal leggings and gloves, a warm hat, and waterproof footwear. An anorak or umbrella will do for spring and autumn showers. A T-shirt and shorts are good for summer, although you may need long sleeves and trousers to enter some churches and monasteries.

3 Visas and Passports

Most nationalities need a visa for Russia. To obtain a 30-day tourist visa, submit a passport valid for at least six months after the date of entry, a visa application form, the fee, a passport photograph, and two separate documents – a tourist voucher and an invitation letter provided by your hotel or travel agent.

4 Registration

All visitors to Russia must register with the police within 72 hours of arrival. Your hotel or hostel is legally obliged to register you within 24 hours of your arrival and may charge a fee for this. Those staying in private homes must be registered by their hosts.

5 Customs

Russian customs regulations are notoriously strict. Anyone bringing cash worth over 337,520 Rub (€7,360) or valuable items into Russia should ensure that they declare them on a stamped customs declaration form, which must be produced upon departure. Any antiques exported from Russia need certification to prove they have no cultural or historical value.

6 Embassies and Consulates

For advice on visa requirements, contact your nearest Russian embassy or consulate. Note that the Russian Consulate in London has outsourced its visa service to M/S VF Services (<http://ru.vfsglobal.co.uk>). Many countries, including the US, UK and several European countries, have embassies in Moscow.

7 Money

Russia's currency – the rouble – can only be purchased within Russia. Euros, US dollars and pounds sterling are the most easily exchangeable currencies (see p109).

8 Time Zone

Moscow is three to four hours ahead of GMT, eight hours ahead of US

Eastern Standard Time, and six hours behind Australian Eastern Standard time.

9 Electrical Appliances

Russia uses 220 V-style twin-pin sockets that are compatible with most European plugs. If you are carrying appliances that have British or American plugs, remember to bring adaptors, as these are hard to find in Moscow. They can usually be bought at airports.

10 Language

The main challenge for most beginners in Russian is the Cyrillic alphabet. Those planning to spend more than a few days in Moscow should consider learning it, as street signs, metro station information boards and bus timetables are all written in Cyrillic. Try to learn a few basic phrases – few Russians speak English well.

TOP 10 Getting There and Around

1 Airports

Sheremetevo 2, the oldest of Moscow's three main international airports, is located north of the city, and is linked to Savelovskaya metro station by an express train. The newer Vnukovo Airport, in the southeast, has an express train connection to Kievskaya metro station, and Domodedovo Airport, in the southwest, is linked to Paveletskaya metro station.

2 Train Stations

Passengers from western Europe arrive at Belorusskiy Station (Belorusskaya metro). Those travelling from Prague, Budapest and Kiev arrive at Kievskiy Station (Kievskaya metro). Arrivals from St Petersburg disembark at Leningradskiy Station, one of three main stations on Komsomolskaya Ploshchad (Komsomolskaya metro).

3 Bus Stations

Eurolines buses arrive at Leningradskiy Station, while buses to and from St Petersburg and all other Russian cities operate from the Central Bus Station, which, it should be noted, is nowhere near the city centre. ☎ Leningradskiy Station: Map H1; 3 Komsomolskaya Ploshchad; Komsomolskaya (metro) • Central Bus Station: Map B1; Ulitsa Uralskaya 2; Shchyolskaya (metro)

4 River Station

☎ Northern River Terminal: Map A1 • Leningradskoye shosse 51 • (495) 457 4050 • Rechnoy Vokzal (metro)

5 Metro

Moscow's metro system (see pp24–5), which handles more passengers than the London and New York subways combined, is by far the easiest way to get around the city. Passengers can buy single tickets or multiple-journey cards that are swiped upon entry and valid for the length of the journey.

6 Taxis

Moscow has official, metered taxis identifiable by their chequered doors, but Russians usually prefer to flag down any car and negotiate a fare with the driver. Single female travellers should opt for Pink Taxi or Ladies Red Taxi, both of which are considered to be safe. ☎ Ladies Red Taxi: (495) 646 0846 • New Moscow Taxi: (495) 780 6780 • New Yellow Taxi: (495) 940 8888 • Pink Taxi: (495) 662 0003

7 Buses, Trams and Trolleybuses

An extensive network of buses, trams, and trolleybuses covers

Moscow, operating from 6am to 1am the next morning. Tickets are available at kiosks next to stops or from the driver and are valid for a single journey.

8 Minibuses

Private minibuses, or marshrutki, follow numbered routes with destinations pasted on their windows. Although these are slightly more expensive than public transport, they are much quicker and can be flagged down at any point along their route.

9 Car Rental and Driving

Europcar has car rental offices at Moscow's three international airports as well as in town. Thrifty has a central rental office on Leningradskoye shosse. Drivers must carry their passport, car registration documents and driving licence, and ensure that the car is equipped with a fire extinguisher, first-aid kit and fluorescent jacket. Cautious driving is advisable. ☎ Europcar: (495) 783 7161 • Thrifty Car Rental: (495) 788 6888

10 Walking

The central sights around Red Square and the Kremlin can easily be covered on foot, as can the churches and galleries of the Zamoskvoreche district. Wear comfortable shoes.

TOP 10 Etiquette

1 Greetings

Men greet each other with a handshake. Women are greeted with a nod or, if they are very close, a kiss on the cheek. Friends of all ages greet each other with the word "privet," while "zdravstvuyte" is used for formal occasions.

2 Political Discussions

Russians are, more by circumstance than by desire, accustomed to political discussion. While the younger generation is more politically apathetic than that which grew up in the USSR, discussions on topics such as the Chechen War can become heated, particularly if a tone critical of Russia's actions there is taken.

3 Personal Questions

Russians are a lot more willing to ask, and answer, questions that in the West might be considered to be of a personal nature. You might be asked about your salary, or even your family life. However, as a foreigner, you could be seen to be "prying" if you were the one to initiate such questions.

4 Giving Up Seats

It is accepted practice for young passengers on public transport to give up seats to their elders, pregnant women and people with disabilities.

Failure to do so may lead to on-the-spot public condemnation from your fellow passengers. The younger generation is, however, slowly losing the habit of public transport gallantry.

5 Male-Female Relations

Men are expected to foot the bill for their female companions in restaurants. Any suggestion to split the cost would be frowned upon. It is also common for women to find doors opened for them, to be helped off buses and to be excluded from any physical work.

6 Drinking Customs

Russians drink plenty of vodka and the process of drinking has its own rituals. Never drink from the bottle and always take a bite to eat between shots. Toasts are long and frequently made; if you are called upon to make one, a simple "Za zdorovie!" ("To your health!") may not be enough.

7 Smokers

Russians are among the world's heaviest smokers. Most restaurants have a smoking section and there are no smoke-free bars or clubs. However, smoking is banned on public transport. Cigarettes are cheap, with many foreign brands being bootlegged. Non-filtered cigarettes, manufactured in Russia and sold for absurdly cheap prices, are also available.

8 Being a Guest

If you are invited to a private flat, it is customary to bring a bottle of alcohol and some flowers for the woman of the house. Russians take their shoes off at home and change into slippers.

9 The "Public Front"

In offices, shops and stations, there is a "public front" which translates into a certain rudeness when dealing with strangers, although attitudes are changing. These same people may well be warm, kind individuals at heart, but if you encounter them in their guise of minor official, shop assistant or ticket-seller, you are not likely to experience the benign side of their character.

10 In Churches

Orthodox churches are intense places where mankind is made to feel utterly humble. There are no pews; worshippers stand for the duration of the services. Women cover their heads while men remove their hats. Photography may be strictly forbidden in some churches, but is allowed for a fee in others. Candles, usually sold on the spot, can be placed in front of the icons.

8 Disabled Visitors

Moscow's disabled facilities have long been inadequate, but there are signs of improvement. New public buildings, offices and hotels are being fitted with ramps and lifts. The metro system remains inaccessible to wheelchairs.

9 City Tours

Both Capital Tours and Patriarchy Dom Tours run daily bus tours of the city, but those run by the latter are particularly good. ## TOP 10 Shopping Tips

1 Opening Hours

The main opening hours for most shops are Monday to Saturday from 9am until 6pm. Larger shops and malls tend to open at around 10 or 11am and close between 10 and 11pm. Small shops usually close for an hour at lunchtime.

2 DVDs and CDs

Although you'll still come across the odd rickety street stall piled with cheap pirated CDs and DVDs, gone are the days when regular shops sold them alongside the much more expensive original copies. Nowadays, Mir Kino is one of the best stocked DVD stores in Moscow.

- ☎ Mir Kino: Map P2
- Ulitsa Maroseyka 6/8
- (495) 628 5145

3 Refunds

Refunds are hard to get in Moscow, as shops generally don't consider themselves responsible for the quality of the items they sell and tend to point unsatisfied customers in the direction of the producer. You may have better luck with small craft and souvenir shops, but they are more likely to offer an exchange than a refund.

4 Electrical Goods

Although all the usual electronic goods are available in Moscow,

there is no particular reason to buy them here, as prices are much the same as in other European countries.

5 Designer Labels

The boutiques along Ulitsa Petrovka and in the Petrovskiy Pasazh, TsUM (see p86) and GUM (see p64) shopping malls are just some of the many outlets that sell high-end designer goods at extortionate prices – often outstripping those in London, Paris and Milan. Those seeking value for money should stick to window-shopping.

6 Buying Antiques

There are strict customs regulations governing the export of antiques. Paintings, icons and antiques over 100 years old require an export licence, usually procured at great cost and loss of time. Printed material produced before 1958 needs an "expert's certificate", which can be obtained from certain accredited shops.

7 Sales

Moscow's shops have seasonal sales in the same way as most other cities. However, considering the extortionate prices of some of the designer-label clothes they sell, it may seem that even with a 50 per cent discount you will not be getting much of a bargain.

8 Haggling

Unless they are having a slow day, the market traders running souvenir stalls around Red Square are unlikely to haggle over prices. It can be quite different at Izmaylovo market (see p52), where most traders seem willing to negotiate. Resist haggling before you have checked the prices of similar goods at neighbouring stalls.

9 Kassa System

The Kassa system is an exasperating product of Communism that has thankfully nearly died out. It required shop customers to queue two or three times in order to purchase a single item. In the first queue customers received a ticket stating the price of their item; in the second they paid for it and received another ticket; in the third queue they got to exchange the ticket for the item.

10 Bargains

Izmaylovo market (see p52) is by far the best place to hunt for bargains. Besides the hand-painted icons sold in churches and monasteries, it sells a wide variety of souvenirs as well as rugs and general bric-à-brac. Smokers will be delighted that cigarettes cost as little as 45 Rub (€1) a packet.

TOP 10 Moscow on a Budget

1 Free Wi-Fi

Those with laptops can take advantage of the free Wi-Fi access provided by most cafés, bars and hotels, although a few establishments charge by the hour. Some McDonalds restaurants offer customers free use of computers with Internet access.

2 Hostels and Homestays

Hostels offer the cheapest accommodation in Moscow, starting at around 675 Rub (€15) per night for a dormitory bed and 1,345 Rub (€30) for a twin room. Dorms are mixed-sex and reasonably clean. Homestays are also an inexpensive option, but are only usually available to those enrolled on Russian language courses. ☎ www.hofa.ru

3 Parks

There are plenty of huge parks (see p45) to visit in Moscow. Gorky is the most central and has a funfair; Izmaylovo is one of the largest; and Kolomenskoe is a picturesque spot with a historic estate. In winter, Moscow's ponds and lakes turn into ice rinks that anyone with a pair of skates can enjoy.

4 Business Lunches/Bufets

Business lunches are a great way to save money in this costly city. Most restaurants offer a set menu of a non-alcoholic drink, starter, main course and dessert for a fixed price between noon and 4pm on weekdays. Another money saver is the all-you-can-eat buffet, where you "buy" a plate and fill it as many times as you can. Shesh Besh (see p93) has a very good all-you-can-eat salad bar.

5 City Transport

For less than 44 Rub (€1) you can catch a bus, tram or trolley bus and cross the entire city. One of the best bus routes is No. 119, which starts at Kievskaya metro station and takes passengers to the giant Moscow State University building (see p97). Trolleybus No. 7 begins at Park Pobedy metro and travels all the way to Kamenny Most, beside the Kremlin.

6 Student Discounts

Holders of international student cards are entitled to a 50 per cent discount at all state museums and galleries. Those with student cards issued in Russia pay even less. Students can also benefit from discounts on train fares, public transport passes, and concert and theatre tickets.

7 Churches

Although Stalin destroyed an estimated 400 of Moscow's historic churches, plenty remain scattered throughout the city and they are all free to enter. The only exception is St Basil's Cathedral (see pp8–9).

8 Metro Sightseeing

It is possible to spend an entire day exploring the magnificent stations of Moscow's metro system (see pp24–5) for the price of a ticket. Construction began in the 1930s and is still underway today as the system expands further into the suburbs.

9 Food Stalls

Food stalls and markets are the cheapest and quickest way to eat when you are out and about. Tempting options include fresh blini (pancakes), hot dogs, Chinese noodles and pirogi (pies). It is best to avoid the kebab stalls, as they have notoriously low hygiene standards.

10 Window Shopping

Moscow is packed with window-shopping opportunities. These range from elegant boutiques in splendid malls, such as GUM (see p64) and TsUM (see p86), which stock the world's most exclusive labels, to mainstream malls and the bustling markets at Dorogomilovskiy and Izmaylovo (see p52).

TOP 10 Health and Security

1 Personal Safety

Keep credit cards and most of your cash in a hidden money belt while carrying a small sum in your pocket or wallet that can be handed over if necessary. Carry a photocopy of your passport rather than the original, avoid walking alone late at night and watch out for scams (see p110).

2 Women Travelling Alone

Although single Russian women can often be spotted flagging down taxis, it is not advisable for female tourists to do the same. The women-only taxi service provided by Pink Taxi and Ladies Red Taxi are highly recommended (see p103). Unaccompanied women should also exercise caution entering nightclubs as they may be mistaken for prostitutes and hassled by doormen.

3 Emergency Services

Police, fire and ambulance services can be contacted using emergency numbers (fire: 01; police: 02; ambulance: 03). Operators are unlikely to understand foreign languages, so it is advisable, if at all possible, to engage the help of a Russian speaker.

4 Police

Moscow's police are best avoided unless you are in genuine trouble, when a loud shout or scream should hopefully bring them running.

5 Theft

Moscow's violent crime rate is low compared with other major capitals, but petty theft is rife and visitors should be constantly vigilant against pickpockets (see p110). Store valuables in the hotel safe and keep your camera and wallet well out of sight.

6 Terrorism

The late 1990s and early 2000s saw a number of bombings and attacks on Moscow, including the Dubrovka Theatre Siege in 2002 (see p33), as Chechen separatists strove to establish an independent state. However, the end of the Chechen War has seen the terrorist threat decrease significantly in recent years.

7 Health Precautions

Visitors should stick to bottled mineral water or boil their tap water before drinking. Food poisoning is a common complaint which can be avoided to some extent by frequent hand washing. Check with your doctor about vaccinations before departing.

8 Medical Treatment

Russian hospitals will provide free basic treatment for most foreign visitors, but the standard of care is likely to be lower than in their home country. Visitors should ensure they have a good medical insurance policy allowing them to use the city's expensive private medical clinics, which have higher standards.

9 Pharmacies

Apteka (pharmacies) are identifiable by a green cross hanging outside, and stock a wide range of products and medicines. However, visitors on prescription medication should take the precaution of carrying with them enough to cover their trip. Branches of the 24-hour pharmacy chain 36.6 can be found throughout the city, including some in the city centre. Taxi drivers should also be able to help locate them.

☎ Map D2: Ulitsa 1st Tverskaya-Yamskaya 8/1 • Map K4: Novyy Arbat 15 • Map R2: Zemlyanoy val 25

10 Insurance

Medical insurance is compulsory for tourists visiting Russia. When choosing a policy it may be worth opting for a provider that will pay for any treatment on the spot instead of reimbursing the costs upon your return home.

TOP 10 Banking and Communications

1 Currency

Russia's currency is the rouble (Rub) which is split into 100 kopeks. Though the rouble stabilized following the 1998 financial crisis, it has been severely weakened by the 2008–9 global credit crisis. Russian roubles are not sold outside Russia, so visitors must purchase them upon arrival.

2 Credit Cards

Although credit cards are accepted at most major restaurants, hotels and supermarkets, many smaller establishments are not equipped to deal with them, so always carry cash as a back-up. Keep a photocopy of your cards separately and warn your card providers that you will be travelling abroad to prevent your cards from being automatically blocked for security reasons.

3 ATMs

ATMs are as ubiquitous here as in any other major city and most offer currency withdrawal in roubles, dollars and euros. Try to avoid using machines that are not attached to banks; staff in shops and bars with ATMs will not have access to the machines in the event of your card being swallowed.

4 Changing Money

Numerous small exchange bureaus can be found in kiosks around the city centre. Most are commission-free, but check the rates before proceeding to ensure you get a fair deal. Banks and hotels are the safest places to change money, but usually charge quite high commission fees.

5 Traveller's Cheques

The Bank of Moscow will change American Express traveller's cheques commission-free, while most other banks charge around 3 per cent. Some larger hotels can also change traveller's cheques for a sizeable commission.

☎ Bank of Moscow: Map M1 • Ulitsa Tverskaya 8 • (495) 299 2010

6 International Money Transfers

International money transfers can be received via Western Union at most Russian banks. Transfers can be completed in a few minutes and are paid out in US dollars. Recipients must produce a valid form of identification.

☎ www.westernunion.ru

7 Telephones and Dialling Codes

Public telephones can be found all over the city. Some accept coins, but most require phone cards that can be purchased in metro stations, banks, post offices, and some newspaper kiosks. The city code 495 covers most of Moscow, but some parts of the city use 499. When calling between cities in Russia, dial 8 followed by the city code and the local number. To phone abroad, dial 8 followed by 10 and then the country code.

8 Mobile Phones

Mobile phones with roaming will function normally in Russia, but making and receiving calls is very expensive. Check prices with your phone provider before your departure and consider buying a Russian SIM card to use for the duration of your stay.

9 Internet Access

Moscow is well-equipped for anyone with a laptop, as almost every hotel, bar and café has a Wi-Fi connection. Most are free, though a few charge by the hour. There are plenty of Internet clubs in Moscow. One of the most central is the 24-hour TimeOnline Internet Club in the Manezh Mall (see p86).

10 Post

The Russian postal service is notoriously slow; international post is likely to take between two and four weeks to arrive at its destination. DHL has an office in the Marriott Grand Hotel.

TOP 10 Things to Avoid

1 Police

There is a heavy police presence in Moscow, but the usual wisdom applies – if you have done nothing wrong, they are unlikely to be a problem. In case you are stopped, it is advisable to carry a photocopy of your passport and visa to show them rather than handing over your original documents.

2 Scams

An enormous variety of scams have been practised at one time or another in Moscow. A recurring favourite is for a passerby to drop a wallet bulging with cash as he passes you; picking it up will lead you into trouble. You should also avoid any foreigners apparently in distress who claim to need your help urgently. In general, exercise extreme caution when approached by strangers.

3 Street Money Changers

Never change money on the street, even if you have been offered a great exchange rate; it is likely that you will be cheated or robbed by getting involved with street hustlers. Stick to banks, hotels, or exchange kiosks.

4 Standing Out

It may sound obvious, but the more you can blend into the crowd, the better. Avoid speaking too loudly in a foreign language or wandering around with your nose buried in a map or guide book. One of the best ways to avoid attention is to buy a Russian newspaper and carry it tucked under your arm.

5 Offers of Cheap Rooms

Private adverts offering unbelievably cheap rooms in the city centre can often be seen plastered on walls in public areas. Avoid being drawn in by such apparent bargains, as sooner or later it will transpire that the prices are accompanied by extortionate agency fees.

6 Taxis without an Agreed Fare

All official taxis in Moscow have meters (see p103), but some are so out-of-date that the driver will prefer to negotiate the fare with the passenger. Always agree on the fare before accepting the ride to avoid the driver naming an exorbitant price at your destination.

7 Taxi Drivers on Foot

Avoid taxi drivers who approach you on foot offering transport in their nearby vehicle. This often happens outside restaurants, nightclubs, train stations and airports, and is very likely to lead to trouble. Look for the nearest queue of taxis or flag one down and approach it yourself instead.

8 Crowded Areas

Try to avoid large crowds and travelling in overcrowded public transport, especially in the city centre. Pickpockets often target buses and trams, using knives to slice open bags and remove valuables before jumping off at the next stop. Be sure to keep your bag in sight and your valuables out of sight.

9 Street Toilet Cubicles

Lines of portable plastic toilet cubicles are a frequent sight in the centre and are best avoided. A far better option is to walk into a hotel or restaurant and ask to use their facilities, or head for the nearest branch of McDonalds.

10 Crossing the Road

Drivers in Moscow seem to treat ring roads as their own personal racetrack and frequently hurtle by at breakneck speeds. Pedestrian crossings never seem to provide enough time to cross these vast eight-lane highways, often leaving people stranded midway across. It is worth walking further up the road until you find a perehod (underpass).

TOP 10 Accommodation and Dining Tips

1 Tipping

Although it is not compulsory to tip in most restaurants, a 10–15 per cent tip will always be appreciated by waiting staff and should hopefully ensure you receive good service if you intend to return. Restaurants that do have a service charge will list it on the menu and the bill.

2 Travelling with Children

It should not be assumed that restaurants will have highchairs or that hotels will have cots, but Russians are very friendly towards children and are likely to be helpful. The city benefits from a great range of fun and interesting activities for children (see pp54–5).

3 Choosing a Hotel

Moscow has a wide variety of accommodation options ranging from homestays and hostels to high-end hotels. Many of the mid-range hotel options are far from the centre in large Soviet-era blocks, so it is worth checking the transport available.

4 Location

One of the most important factors when choosing the location of a hotel is its proximity to a metro station. Note that the metro closes at 1am, so if you are planning any late nights out, a central hotel might be a wise choice.

5 Reservations

It is well worth booking accommodation in advance to save you traipsing around the city in search of available rooms. Numerous international hotel reservation websites will arrange bookings. A small deposit is usually taken by the website and the balance is paid to the hotel upon arrival (beware of sites that demand the balance up front). Most major hotels have their own websites with reservation options.

6 Room Rates

Room rates are fixed and usually quoted on hotel websites. In the older Soviet-era hotels, renovated rooms are offered to foreigners at a higher rate, so those on a budget might try to secure a cheaper deal in a dingy room with retro Soviet decor. Prices usually include breakfast (the standard of which varies) and tend to drop slightly between July and September.

7 Vegetarian Food

Russian cuisine is predominantly meat-based; even salads often contain meat. However, vegetarians are reasonably well catered for with a good range of salads, soups and side dishes on most menus. Japanese restaurants offer plenty of vegetarian options, as do most pizzerias. More and more vegetarian restaurants are springing up around the city. Jagannath (see p72), with its creative Indian vegetarian dishes, is a great option.

8 Business Lunches

The vast majority of restaurants offer an excellent-value set lunch menu on working weekdays (see p107).

9 Types of Cuisine

Moscow's craze for sushi has led to the opening of hundreds of Japanese restaurants, and sushi appears on the menu of almost every eatery. Fortunately, the city is full of alternatives too. Italian, French and Georgian cuisine have long been popular, as have Uzbek, Indian, Chinese, Vietnamese, Turkish and Lebanese, to a lesser extent. Traditional Russian dishes are as ubiquitous as ever.

10 Smoking

At the time of writing the Russian parliament was considering a smoking ban in public places – an unpopular move, as an estimated 40 per cent of Russian adults are smokers. In the meantime, non-smokers make do with separate seating areas in restaurants.

TOP 10 Boutique Hotels

1 Golden Apple

Featuring a huge golden apple in its lobby, this impressive five-star hotel is housed in a fine 19th-century building. The stylish rooms are ultra-modern in design and the deluxe apartments are appointed with Philippe Starck fixtures. Map E2 • Ulitsa Malaya Dmitrovka 11 • (495) 980 7000 • Metro: Pushkinskaya • www.goldenapple.ru • €€€€

2 Metropol

This renowned Art Nouveau hotel has played host to luminaries throughout modern history, from Tolstoy to Al Gore. Decorated by some of Russia's most famous early 20th-century artists, it is one of Moscow's finest hotels. Map N2 • Teatralny proezd 1/4 • (499) 501 7800 • Metro: Teatralnaya • www.metropol-moscow.ru • €€€€€

3 Savoy

Refurbished in 2005, this hotel now combines state-of-the-art facilities with lavish 19th-century Neo-Classical style. The Savoy restaurant (see p73) is one of Moscow's best. Map N2 • Ulitsa Rozhdestvenka 3/6, Bldg 1 • (495) 620 8500 • Metro: Teatralnaya • www.savoy.ru • €€€€€

4 MaMaison Pokrovka

This hotel's refreshing style is a modernized blend of 1930s and 1950s design, with plenty of natural light and motifs borrowed from the Moscow metro. Standards are exceptionally high. Map R2 • Ulitsa Pokrovka 40/2 • (495) 229 5757 • Metro: Chistye Prudy • www.pokrovka-moscow.com • €€€€

5 Le Royal Meridien National

This grand hotel is one of the city's best and has long been at the centre of historic events. Lenin stayed in room 107 shortly after the 1917 Revolution, and Trotsky made his last speech in Russia from one of its balconies. Map M3 • Ulitsa Mokhovaya 15/1 • (495) 258 7000 • Metro: Okhotnyy Ryad • www.national.ru • €€€€€

6 East-West

This classy hotel has an intimate atmosphere and a delightful courtyard garden. Its central location puts it within easy walking distance of Moscow's main sights. Map L2 • Tverskoy Bulvar 14 • (495) 290 0404 • Metro: Pushkinskaya, Arbatskaya • www.eastwesthotel.ru • €€€€€

7 Ritz-Carlton

Ritz-Carlton boasts the largest rooms in town, bathrooms lined with Altai Mountain marble, and views of the Kremlin. Complimentary services on offer include overnight shoe-shining and a personal butler to act as guide and interpreter. Map M2 • Ulitsa Tverskaya 3 • (495) 225 8888 • Metro: Teatralnaya • www.ritzcarlton.com • €€€€€

8 Sovietsky

This characterful place was added to the exclusive 19th-century Yar restaurant (see p99) by order of Stalin in 1951. Built in Russian Imperial style, it features majestic marble staircases and colonnaded halls. Map A2 • Leningradskiy proezd 32/2 • (495) 960 2000 • Metro: Leninskiy Prospekt • www.sovietsky.ru • €€€€

9 Swissôtel Krasnye Holmy

Among the city's top contemporary five-star hotels, the 32-floor Swissôtel comes with some of the best views in Moscow. Map G5 • Kosmodamianskaya nab. 52/6 • (495) 787 9800 • Metro: Paveletskaya • www.swissotel.com • €€€€€

10 Leningradskaya Hilton

Built in the early 1950s, this flagship member of the Hilton chain was recently refurbished to meet international standards of luxury. The building's showpiece is its double-height entrance lobby flanked by a pair of marble staircases. Map G1 • Ulitsa Kalanchevskaya 21/40 • (495) 627 5550 • Metro: Komsomolskaya • www.hilton.com • €€€€

TOP 10 International Hotels

1 Balchug Kempinski Moscow

Renovated to the exacting standards of the Kempinski chain, this luxurious hotel occupies a 19th-century building that has housed a succession of hotels since 1812.

📍 Map N4 • Ulitsa Balchug 1 • (495) 287 2000 • Metro: Novokuznetskaya • www.kempinski-moscow.com • €€€€€

2 Sheraton Palace

Noted for its reliably high standards and top-class facilities, this hotel has three restaurants serving an excellent variety of cuisine, a fitness centre and a jogging track. 📍 Map D1 • Ulitsa Tverskaya-Yamskaya 1, 19 • (495) 931 9700 • Metro: Belorusskaya • http://eng.sheratonpalace.ru • €€€€

3 Novotel Moscow Centre

Typically smart and functional, the Novotel is characterless and plain, yet comfortingly familiar. Though not particularly central, it is literally on top of a metro station, which makes it an ideal base from which to explore the city. 📍 Map E1 • Ulitsa Novoslobodskaya 23 • (495) 780 4000 • Metro: Mendeleyevskaya • www.novotel.com • €€€

4 Marriott Tverskaya

This vast luxury hotel has an impressive atrium-style central lobby that rises several floors to a glass ceiling. Standards are of the first order, while facilities include five conference rooms, a fitness centre and various business-related services.

📍 Map D1 • Ulitsa 1st Tverskaya-Yamskaya 34 • (495) 258 3000 • Metro: Belorusskaya • www.marriott.com • €€€€

5 Radisson Slavyanskaya

Standing on the banks of the Moskva river, this massive 410-room hotel has some great views of the city. It is also conveniently close to a metro station. 📍 Map C4 • Europe Square 2 • (495) 941 8000 • Metro: Kievskaya • www.moscow.radissonas.com • €€€€€

6 Kebur Palace

This pleasant four-star hotel offers exceptionally good service and standards. It is within walking distance of Gorky Park (see p90) and the New Tretyakov Gallery (see p89) and boasts one of the city's best Georgian restaurants – the Tiflis (see p79). 📍 Map K6 • Ulitsa Ostozhenka 32 • (495) 733 9070 • Metro: Park Kultury • www.hotelkeburpalace.ru • €€€€€

7 Akvarel

Huge gilt-framed mirrors, marble floors and plush antique-style furniture lend the elegant Akvarel plenty of charm, assisted by smartly uniformed staff. 📍 Map M1 • Stolesnikov pereulok 12 • (495) 502 9430 • Metro: Teatralnaya • www.hotelakvarel.ru • €€€€€

8 Holiday Inn Sushevsky

Reasonably priced for a hotel of this standard, the Holiday Inn is some distance from the centre but near enough to a metro station to allow easy access to the city. Facilities include a fitness centre and a range of business services. 📍 Map A1 • Ulitsa Sushevskiy val 74 • (495) 225 8282 • Metro: Rizhskaya • www.holiday-inn.com • €€€

9 Crowne Plaza

Situated beside the Moskva river, this hotel forms part of World Trade Centre Moscow complex (see p98). A shuttle bus is available to take guests to the closest metro station. 📍 Map C3 • Ulitsa Krasnopresnenskaya 12 • (495) 258 2222 • Metro: Delovoy Tsentr • www.crowneplaza.ru • €€€€

10 Ararat Park Hyatt

This lovely, classy hotel is located right in the centre of Moscow, close to the Bolshoy Theatre (see pp18–19). Its large rooms are richly furnished and have floor-to-ceiling windows with great views. 📍 Map N2 • Ulitsa Neglinnaya 4 • (495) 783 1234 • Metro: Teatralnaya • www.moscow.park.hyatt.com • €€€€€

Phrase Book

In this guide the Russian language has been transliterated into Roman script. All street and place names, and the names of most people, are transliterated according to this system. For some names, where a well-known English form exists, this has been used – hence, Leo (not Lev) Tolstoy. In particular, the names of Russian rulers, such as Peter the Great, are given in their anglicized forms. Throughout the book, transliterated names can be taken as an accurate guide to pronunciation. The Phrase Book also gives a phonetic guide to the pronunciation of words and phrases.

Guidelines for Pronunciation

The Cyrillic alphabet has 33 letters, of which only five (а, к, м, о, т) correspond exactly to their counterparts in English. Russian has two pronunciations (hard and soft) of each of its vowels, and several consonants without an equivalent. The right-hand column of the alphabet, below, demonstrates how Cyrillic letters are pronounced by comparing them to sounds in English words. However, some letters vary in how they are pronounced according to their position in a word. Important exceptions are also noted below. On the following pages, the English is given in the left-hand column, with the Russian and its trans-literation in the middle column. But in the Menu Decoder section the Russian is given in the left-hand column and the English translation in the right-hand column, for ease of use. Because there are genders in Russian, in a few cases both masculine and feminine forms of a phrase are given.

THE CYRILLIC ALPHABET

А а	a	alimony
Б б	b	bed
В в	v	vet
Г г	g	get (see note 1)
Д д	d	debt
Е е	e	yet (see note 2)
Ё ё	e	yonder
Ж ж	zh	leisure (but a little harder)
З з	z	zither
И и	i	see
Й й	y	boy (see note 3)
К к	k	king
Л л	l	loot
М м	m	match
Н н	n	never
О о	o	rob (see note 4)
П п	p	pea
Р р	r	rat (rolling, as in Italian)
С с	s	stop
Т т	t	toffee
У у	u	boot
Ф ф	f	fellow
Х х	kh	kh (like loch)
Ц ц	ts	lets
Ч ч	ch	chair
Ш ш	sh	shove
Щ щ	shch	fresh sheet (with a slight roll)
Ъ		hard sign (no sound, but see note 5)
Ы ы	y	lid
Ь		soft sign (no sound, but see note 5)
Э э	e	egg
Ю ю	yu	youth
Я я	ya	yak

Notes

- 1) Г Pronounced as v in endings -oro and -ero.
- 2) Е Always pronounced ye at the beginning of a word, but in the middle of a word sometimes less distinctly (more like e).
- 3) Й This letter has no distinct sound of its own. It usually lengthens the preceeding vowel.
- 4) О When not stressed it is pronounced like a in across.
- 5) Ъ, Ь The hard sign (Ъ) is rare and indicates a very brief pause before the next letter. The soft sign (Ь, marked in the pronunciation guide as 'y') softens the preceeding consonant and adds a slight y sound: for instance, n' would sound like ny in 'canyon'.
